

TO: PROPERTY OWNERS IN THE PROPOSED RAVENNA-COWEN NORTH HISTORIC DISTRICT (See map below)

SUBJECT: This is to inform you that Board members of Friends of Ravenna-Cowen, a Washington State nonprofit organization, are applying to the Washington State Governor's Advisory Council on Historic Preservation for nomination of the proposed Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District to the National Historic Register and the Washington Heritage Register. The application will be submitted on approximately April 29, 2018. Upon submission, the application will be available at the web site of the State Department of Archaeology and Historic Preservation, <https://dahp.wa.gov>, and the web site of Friends of Ravenna-Cowen, www.friendsofravennacowen.org. The Washington State Governor's Advisory Committee will be considering nominating the proposed Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District at its June 2018 meeting (date, time and place not yet determined as of date of this notice; please see web sites for further information as it becomes available).

A Historic District on the National Register of Historic Places is a geographically definable area possessing significant buildings 50 or more years old united by past events or united aesthetically by plan or physical development. There are no restrictions on renovating or remodeling. There is no requirement to open your home for public tours. The benefit to the neighborhood is that the neighborhood character will be strengthened, giving it an identity and recognition on a national level as well as a state and regional level. The benefit to the public includes a history of the neighborhood housing stock that will be recorded in a publicly available GIS database. See https://dahp.wa.gov/sites/default/files/NRDistrictGuide_0.pdf, pp.10-12 for more information about the effects of a National Registry listing.

If you wish to comment on this proposal or have questions, please contact Michael Houser, State Architectural Historian, Department of Archaeology & Historic Preservation, PO Box 48343, Olympia, WA 98504-8383, Michael.houser@dahp.wa.gov, (360) 586-3076.

Narrative Description

(Describe the historic and current physical appearance of the property. Explain contributing and noncontributing resources if necessary. Begin with a summary paragraph that briefly describes the general characteristics of the property, such as its location, setting, size, and significant features.)

Summary Paragraph

The Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District located in North Seattle is a single-family, middle-class, residential neighborhood of one- and two-story homes, most constructed prior to the early 1930s, with a districtwide average construction date of contributing resources of 1918. This district exhibits a special character, scale and setting that represents a period of population growth and housebuilding resulting from the excitement generated by the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at the State University (now the University of Washington main campus) grounds in 1909 and lasting through the devastating economic Great Depression of the late 1920s and 1930s. The existing cohesive neighborhood conveys a unique feeling in place and time.

The area was originally developed and shaped by arterial city streets on the north and west, by the adjacent Ravenna and Cowen parks on the south, and by a natural ravine leading into Ravenna Park on the east. The area was served by a streetcar line originally running north from the University District along 14th and 15th avenues NE, running up to and along the southern boundary of Ravenna Park.

Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District exhibits the range of residential architectural styles prevalent during one of Seattle's greatest population growth periods. Styles mainly include Craftsman, Tudor Revival and Colonial Revival styles; many designs were taken directly from pattern books and kit home catalogs dating from the early 1900s to the 1930s. Most of the district's residences are relatively modest structures, built to appeal to young professionals and the working class. Some of the homes in the district were built on a speculative basis by individual and large-scale investors, while others were constructed for specific new owners. Many of the speculative homes were at first rentals, and later were sold to individual families.

Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District's period of significance begins in 1906, with the anticipation of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, and runs to the early 1930s, with only a handful of homes built from the 1940s through the 1960s. The district retains a strong level of integrity of location, setting, design, materials, workmanship, feeling and association. A high percentage of homes within the neighborhood contribute to the character of the historic district. Many individual buildings within the district demonstrate a high level of integrity, but even those of less historic integrity support the cohesive feel of the district. The numbers of contributing and non-contributing resources are as follows:

Setting

The Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District is located north of Seattle's University District and generally southeast of the Roosevelt Urban Village district. The district is included within and located in the southwestern corner of the larger Ravenna-Bryant community as defined by the City of Seattle. The district includes the portion north of Ravenna Boulevard and east of 12th Avenue NE of Cowen's University Park Addition, the entirety of the University Scenic, University Place, and College additions, as well as the western portions of Ravenna Springs Park, Wade, and Alder Park additions.

The topography of the area generally slopes gently downward from NE 65th Street south to the northern boundaries of Ravenna and Cowen Parks, where the slope abruptly becomes steep leading downward into the natural landscapes of the parkland. Additionally, the steep slope of an unnamed forested ravine defines the district's eastern boundary.

The district's street pattern is only partially based on a grid pattern as the streets of the southern portion follow the diagonal line created by the boundaries of Ravenna and Cowen parks. Streets within the district generally have sidewalks on both sides of the streets, with well-kept parking strips, many featuring a range of street trees planted over time by individual homeowners. The exception is along the boundaries of Ravenna and Cowen Parks and the district's easternmost portion. Many of the residential blocks have central alleys, most paved, that reflect the introduction of the automobile and the need for garages to house them. In the blocks without alleys, garages are located either behind the house, accessed by a driveway or on sloping lots dug into the lower portion of the lot at sidewalk level.

All the streets within the district are currently paved, most with concrete, but one portion of NE 63rd Street between 17th Ave NE and 19th Ave NE and portions of Brooklyn Avenue NE is paved with fine-grained asphalt. Some streets had paving brick gutters, although most of these have either been removed or paved over. Street lighting is generally "Cobra-head" lights mounted on electricity/telephone poles.

A typical street has traditionally landscaped front yards with a small lawn, planting beds, shrubs and small trees. Most homes have landscaped front and side yards, with larger landscaped backyards and a garage or outbuilding at the alley. Some houses have large trees in either the front or rear yards. One notable City of Seattle heritage tree, an 90-foot tall English Elm, is located on the southern side of NE 63rd Street near 18th Avenue NE. Recently, some homeowners have chosen to remove lawns and landscaped the front yard with groundcovers, shrubs and other plantings. In some blocks, houses sit above the street with rockeries or retaining walls.

Contributing and Non-Contributing Resources

A substantial percentage of the total buildings within the district are contributing resources, approximately 68 percent, although a relatively small number of buildings have had alterations significant enough for them to be considered non-contributing historic structures. Window replacement, small additions and decks to the rear of the house, basement egress windows, dormer alterations, or an additional roof dormer are the most common alterations to the houses. Replacement windows, especially if they follow the original design consideration, and appropriate residing and reroofing should not by themselves disqualify a property as an historic contributing resource. If a number of changes to a property occur that impact the physical integrity to an extent that is inconsistent with the intent of the Secretary of the Interior's standards for historic properties that property is considered non-contributing to the district's overall historic character.

Outbuildings such as garages and sheds are present on many properties, but their date of construction was sometimes later than the original house on the property. Determination of their age or an understanding of alterations that have occurred to the outbuilding is limited by the information available. As ancillary structures, outbuildings have been listed with their associated residence rather than as separate contributing structures on their own.

The district has historic contributing residential properties, most all single-family residences, with a few two-family homes. Construction dates were derived from a combination of King County Assessor's records residing at the Puget Sound Regional Archives in Bellevue, the City of Seattle permit records at the Department of Construction and Inspection (DCI), and articles within the Seattle Daily Times archive available through the Seattle Public Library. The average year of construction of all the homes in the neighborhood is 1918. The majority of the homes were built prior to 1930, with about 96 percent. Less than 2 percent of buildings within the district were constructed after the period of significance (1969).

Residential Architectural Styles and Periods

Although the earliest historic contributing house in the district dates to 1900, residential construction occurred primarily between 1908 and 1930, and as a result the most common residential architectural styles found in the Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District are typical of those found in other older Seattle neighborhoods including Craftsman, Tudor Revival and Colonial Revival. Other styles/types (including American/Workingman's Foursquare, Prairie and Federal) are also found although relatively rare. Styles from the post-World War II period, found in smaller numbers, include Minimal Traditional, Ranch and Modern/Contemporary. Below is a general description of predominant building styles, as well as their general distribution within the district. Residential architectural styles are generally well distributed throughout the district, and correlate directly with the construction dates of individual buildings.

American Foursquare or Seattle Box (1895-1920)

This housing type is generally square (but occasionally rectangular) in plan, has two and a half stories, and usually has a hipped roof with deep overhangs. Styles of American Foursquare dwellings range from Classical Revival to Craftsman. Cladding is typically horizontal beveled wood siding, and many examples have full or partial-width porches, hipped-roof bay windows at second-floor corners and large central dormers. There are 8 examples of this style, or about 2 percent of the houses, in the Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District, distributed randomly through the district. Representative examples in the district include: 1728 NE Naomi Place and 6129 Brooklyn Avenue NE.

Eclectic Classical Revival (1880-1920)

This stylistic category includes buildings that are not designed by trained designers and architects that respond to specific needs, rather than popular trends, utilizing traditional technologies. Eclectic Classical Revival design may incorporate a mix of elements drawn from Classical historical prototypes for aesthetic purposes which go beyond a building's functional requirements, but not with conscious or overall consistency. Examples in the district include: 6319 21st Avenue NE and 6310 22nd Ave NE.

Arts & Crafts – Craftsman (1905-1930)

The Craftsman style, manifesting in bungalows and two-story houses—is the predominant style in the Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District, representing nearly 59 percent of the district's buildings. This style originated in the late 1890s, and was influenced by the English Arts & Crafts movement, Asian and East Indian architecture, and Swiss chalets. Typical houses (many of which are bungalows) feature horizontal wood cladding (shingles or lapped bevel siding), low-pitched gable or hip roofs, brackets or corbels supporting roof eaves, exposed wood rafters supporting gutters, use of cobblestone or clinker brick walls, columns and chimneys, and prominent covered entry porches. Dormers, when present, are typically gabled or shed-roofed. Craftsman subgroups include front gables (gable end facing street), side gables (gable ridge parallel to street),

County and State

intersecting gables and cross gable. These terms may also apply to other styles. and hip roofed. Porches are either full width, or partially wrap around the side of the house. Craftsman examples include: 6102 12th Avenue NE, 1731 NE Naomi Place, 6201 23rd Avenue NE, 1304 NE 62nd Street, 1301 NE 63rd Street, and 6323 21st Avenue NE.

The district also includes a few "aeroplane" bungalows, characterized by a "pop-up" second floor, usually of one or two rooms, resembling the cockpit of an airplane. Examples include: 6293 20th Avenue NE and 2206 NE 63rd Street.

Prairie style (1910-1930)

The Prairie style is an American architectural style that developed contemporaneously with the Craftsman style in Chicago, Illinois. Nearly all Prairie-style houses have two stories and low-slope hip roofs. Many have side entries and porches or sunrooms at the street front. There is often a siding material break (e.g., horizontal wood siding to stucco) at the second-floor windowsill line. Windows are usually double-hung wood-sash with upper divided lights. Only about 2 percent of the houses in the neighborhood were built in this style. Examples include: 1738 NE Naomi Place

Colonial - Colonial Revival (1900-1940)

Approximately 26 percent of houses in the district are in the Colonial Revival or Colonial Bungalow style. These are widely distributed throughout the district. The Colonial Revival style was one of the most popular architectural styles in the United States between 1915 and 1930, reflecting the influence of early Colonial English and Dutch residences on the Eastern seaboard. These houses have one or two stories, with gabled, clipped gable, or hipped roofs, and are rectangular or square in plan. While Colonial Revival houses built before 1920 usually had a symmetrical street-front façade with a centered entrance often flanked by pairs of double-hung sashes (often multi-paned), later versions designed for narrow lots had primary side entries centrally placed on the long side of the house. The entry has a portico or an entry vestibule rather than a long covered sitting porch, with Colonial detailing and millwork such as pilasters, columns, fanlights or sidelights. In Seattle, horizontal wood siding is most typical. Representative examples of Colonial Revival houses in the district are: 1721 NE 63rd Street, 6118 21st Avenue NE, 6106 21st Avenue NE, and 1206 NE 61st Street.

The Colonial Bungalow is a smaller subtype of this style, with only one or one-and-a-half stories, but with a symmetrical façade and Colonial detailing. Examples include: 6114 21st Avenue NE and 6323 Brooklyn Avenue NE.

A subset of the Colonial Revival house is the Dutch Colonial Revival, which features a steep-slope gambrel roof. Early examples (c. 1915) often feature a front-gambrel roof, while later examples in the 1920s and 1930s have side gambrels with full-length shed-roof dormers on both sides of the longer side of the house. Some representative examples of this style include: 6230 Ravenna Avenue NE, 1419 NE 63rd Street, 6327 20th Avenue NE, and 2203 NE 63rd Street.

Another sub-set is "aeroplane" Eclectic Colonial Revival type bungalow. The two examples in the district are: 6303 19th Avenue NE and 6223 23rd Avenue NE.

Colonial - Georgian Revival (1900-1930)

Only one house in the district, 1220 NE 63rd Street, that appears to be built in the Georgian Revival style. This style was influenced by the New England Georgian Colonial, and is generally rectangular in plan, two stories, clad in masonry or brick veneer, with a hipped or gabled roof. Most have a central entrance, usually with columns, and windows are typically multi-paned double-hung wood sash.

Tudor Revival (1910-1940)

Approximately 4 percent of houses within the Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District are in the Tudor Revival style, also referred to as Composite Tudors or English Cottages. The style is loosely based upon various late Medieval English prototypes, ranging from thatched-roof folk cottages to grand manor houses. The district contains many varied examples, ranging from the symmetrical half-timbered Elizabethan-inspired English Arts & Crafts house at 1304 NE 62nd Street, to the many asymmetrical steep-roofed brick "stockbroker" cottages constructed in the late 1920s and early 1930s. These later Tudor Revival-style houses are generally clad in brick, although stucco and wood cladding are also evident. Brickwork can be patterned or clinkered, and stonework is often evident in trim, chimneys and quoins. Many houses have decorative half-timbering detail, arched doorways and large exterior chimneys, often stepped in and with patterned brick and stonework and multiple shafts. Windows are typically tall and narrow, often presented in bands, and have multi-pane glazing, occasionally diamond-shaped. Windows can be casement, double-hung, oriel, and semi-hexagonal one- and two-story bays. Roofs are steeply pitched and often side-gabled, and the street-front façade is typically dominated by a front-facing gable. Many gables are clipped. Representative examples within the district include: 6206 17th Avenue NE, 6218 17th Avenue NE, 6100 21st Avenue NE, and 6327 19th Avenue NE.

Minimal Traditional (c. 1935-1950) and Ranch (c. 1935-1975)

Since most of the residences within the district were constructed before 1930, there are only a 19 Minimal Traditional and Ranch style homes (about 4 percent). They are mainly seen as infill. The Minimal Traditional style house is generally smaller, with minimal architectural details. The roof is generally gabled or hipped, with narrow eaves. Entries are near the center and are recessed or have a simple stoop. Window sash may be wood or metal, with one-over-one double-hung sash, sliding windows or fixed sash (including picture or corner windows). Representative examples in the Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District include: 1520 NE 62nd Street, 1524 NE 62nd Street, and 1352 NE 62nd Street.

The Ranch style typically has a broad single-story form, is often clad in brick, has low-pitched gabled or hipped roof with overhanging eaves and no dormers. The entry is often asymmetrically placed and sometimes sheltered by the main roof of the house, and there is generally a picture window. Houses often include an attached garage. Representative examples include: 122 NE Ravenna Boulevard, 6321 18th Avenue NE.

Northwest Contemporary and Mid-Century Modern

Post-World War II architects who built practices in the Greater Seattle area developed a unique architectural style that strove to fit their designs gracefully into the landscape of the Northwest. Characteristics of the style featured natural elements including stone, rustic wood, and exposed structural timbers, while incorporating various design influences including European International style, Craftsman style, indigenous tribal art and Japanese aesthetics. Other characteristics include large overhanging roof eaves and horizontal asymmetry. Designs tended to extend the exterior landscape into the interior with large expanses of full-height glazing and the continuation of exterior materials into the interiors. The interiors typically include open floor plans, beam ceilings, skylights, and the continuation of the natural wood and stone features throughout. There are only a handful of Northwest Contemporary houses within the district including: 6101 Ravenna Avenue NE and 6211 23rd Ave NE.

Accessory Structures (Ancillary buildings)

Accessory structures within the district are generally small garages or sheds that are not the dominant or primary structure on a site. Accessory or ancillary structures could be classified as historic contributing to their site if they were built during the period of significance, retain a fair level of integrity of location, materials, design, setting, workmanship, feeling and association. In general, historic contributing ancillary structures retain much of their original materials and form and are situated on the property in the same or similar manner as during the period of significance. The garage door was not considered as a determining factor of whether the accessory structure is contributing or non-contributing.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph

(Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance and applicable criteria.)

The Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District is a very intact residential community composed of early 20th to mid-century single-family houses that demonstrate the evolution of architectural styles typical of this period in Seattle's development. The neighborhood is significant at the local level and eligible as a National Register of Historic Places historic district under Criterion A, as it relates to the unique development patterns found within the City of Seattle and the people who lived within these homes, as well as under Criterion C for the consistency of architectural styles and workmanship found within the district. Although the period of historic significance might be considered to begin in 1887, the date of the first platted addition to the City of Seattle (Ravenna Springs Park), the first substantial improvements to the area, streets, utilities, and houses, began in 1906. The district's period of significance ends in 1969, following the construction of the homes on the remaining harder-to-develop lots within the neighborhood.

The single-family houses within the district were constructed to house a mixture of middle-class professionals and blue-collar workers. Occupations included physicians, architects, builders, attorneys, college professors, teachers, accountants, dentists, business owners, insurance salesmen, boilermakers, and railroad workers. The widow of General Hiram M. Chittenden, noted engineer and historian, moved to the district after Chittenden's death in 1917. Noted actor Howard Duff and pioneering Pacific Northwest architect, Paul Hayden Kirk, both grew up in the neighborhood. J. Harlan Bretz, Ph.D., the geologist whose research led to the acceptance of the Missoula Floods built a house here before he accepted a faculty position at the University of Chicago. Also, renowned Northwest naval architect and boat builder, Norman Blanchard, lived and raised a family with his wife, Eunice, in the neighborhood. This tight-knit neighborhood nurtured the lives of thousands of families that contributed to the development of the city of Seattle. Many of the houses have housed multiple generations and been passed on from generation to generation. It is notable that when people purchased or rented another house, they often stayed within the immediate area. It was not uncommon for a resident to live nearly their entire life in the neighborhood. Although the neighborhood attracted both blue and white collared workers, it was definitely one of the better educated neighborhoods in Seattle. In 1940, over 20 percent of the neighborhood population had completed four years of college and one of the highest professional employment levels in Seattle.¹ During the same period over 50 percent of the housing units were owner occupied.² It is also interesting to note that among the neighborhoods in Seattle in 1940, females made up the majority of the population, with fewer than 80 men per every 100 women.³

Although the neighborhood was predominantly ethnically northern European, demographic diversity has increased in recent decades, much to the benefit of the neighborhood. The neighborhood remains a vital community of individuals committed to positively contributing to the greater community. Early district residents and their occupations are included in the attached continuation sheets.

Although the first plats in the district, Ravenna Springs Park and the Wade re-plat, were filed in 1887 and 1889 respectively, most residential development did not begin until 20 years later due to the enthusiasm and speculation associated with the upcoming Alaska-Yukon-Pacific (AYP) Exposition held on the University of Washington Campus in 1909. Cowen's University Park plat, which included all of what is now Cowen Park, was filed in 1906, as was the adjoining University Scenic plat to the east. University Place and Alder Park plats were filed a year later in 1907, with the College Plat following in 1917. At that time the area was served by David Denny's Rainier Power & Railroad Company's streetcar line running from downtown Seattle north to the University District and continuing northward to Cowen and Ravenna parks before turning eastward along the southern boundary of Ravenna Springs Park to the eastern park entrance. The streetcar line was extended northward along 15th Ave NE in 1924, to better serve Roosevelt High School opened in 1922.

Most of the district's existing residences were constructed before the Great Depression of the 1930s. Only a few lots with steep slopes remained along the northern ravine, and a few others were scattered throughout the district. The earliest houses were built in the Craftsman style, most one-story bungalows, while later houses tend to be eclectic revivals, either Colonial, Dutch Colonial, or Tudor. The district retains its basic integrity as a pre-Depression residential neighborhood closely linked the University of Washington.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

Early Development 1880s-1910

Before European-American settlers moved to the land just north of Lake Union and Portage Bay, Native Americans had a winter settlement on the northeastern shore of Portage Bay.⁴ William Bell, a member of the Denny Party, was the first European-American landowner in the area, platting the land there prior to 1856. In the mid-1880s, the Seattle, Lake Shore & Eastern Railroad line expanded northwards up the western edge of Lake Washington. The land north of Lake Union and Portage Bay increased in value as a result. By 1887, George and Otilde Dorffel purchased land that included a creek, running from Green Lake to Union Bay, that had carved a deep ravine. The Dorffels established a park along the creek and ravine, naming it Ravenna Springs Park after the Italian coastal city.⁵ In 1888 William Beck purchased 400 acres of land on Union Bay. This land housed Seattle Female College, which ceased operation following the Economic Panic of 1893. Beck also established a flour mill at Ravenna.⁶

David Phillips first surveyed the area surrounding Green Lake for the Surveyor General in 1855.⁷ Green Lake began to be developed by settlers as early as 1869, when Erhart Seifried, also known as "Green Lake John," filed the first homestead claim.⁸ Then-Mayor of Seattle William D. Wood had purchased Seifried's claim by 1887. Charles Waters, another important homesteader, owned land on the southwestern corner of the lake, which was purchased by Guy Phinney in 1889 and eventually became Woodland Park and Woodland Park Zoo.⁹

Seattleites were attracted to Green Lake as a place to get away from the city for recreation. The Green Lake neighborhood started to develop as a suburb of Seattle beginning in 1890, when Luther Griffith and Dr. E. C. Kilbourne developed rail lines to access their developments in what is now Fremont, Wallingford and Green Lake. The Seattle, Lake Shore & Eastern Railway route ran along the northern edge of Lake Union starting in 1885, but access from downtown Seattle to the area was made easier by a streetcar trestle linking what is now Westlake Avenue to the Fremont community, with lines continuing to Green Lake and Woodland Park. Griffith also built the Green Lake Electric Railway and connected the Westlake route to the Green Lake route with a trestle across the western end of Lake Union.¹⁰ Guy Phinney opened his estate to the public and built his private Woodland Park Electric Railway during 1890 to bring visitors up the hill.¹¹ Although Phinney died in 1893, his Woodland Park was important to the development of the neighborhood. In 1899 the city purchased the land for a public park from his widow.¹² At that time the park included formal gardens, a conservatory, a promenade, a hunting lodge, the "Woodlands Hotel" and a menagerie featuring North American animals such as black bear and deer as well as exotic African ostriches. The park's main entrance was at N 50th Street and Fremont Avenue N, where the main zoo entrance is today. A stone arch marked the entrance.¹³

By 1896, the street railway running from downtown Seattle through Fremont and along western Lake Union extended from the southern tip of Green Lake around the eastern and northern shores and to the western shore of the lake.¹⁴ Green Lake Station was located on the northern shore of the lake, on 72nd Street.¹⁵

In 1891 Seattle annexed the Green Lake neighborhood, including what would become the Roosevelt District and the land around the University of Washington. That same year, David Denny's streetcar line extended across the Latona Bridge to Ravenna Park, turning east and running along the southern edge of the park, thus making the region more accessible to the rest of the city. Like the Green Lake neighborhood to the northwest, the area became a bucolic tourist destination. The little town of Ravenna was annexed in 1907.¹⁶

School-age children in the area were served by a one-room log cabin, Weedin School, near the present intersection of 25th Avenue NE and NE 56th Street. Later the residents of the Green Lake area sent their children to a two-room school building on the site of the present day Green Lake School. The first James Stephen's "model plan" wood-frame school was completed on the site in 1902, with a southern addition completed in 1907. The Fairview School (James Stephen), located at NE 78th Street and 10th Avenue, later Roosevelt Way, was completed in 1907 to ease overcrowding at Green Lake School.

In 1906, Englishman Charles Cowen acquired several acres of land between 10th Avenue (later Roosevelt Way NE) and 15th Avenue, platting the area for residential use. He dedicated a large area for park use, located in the southeastern portion of the property at the upper end of the Ravenna Creek ravine and adjacent to Ravenna Park, thus creating the conjoined Cowen and Ravenna Parks.

Due to a number of factors, the population in Seattle grew from around 40,000 in 1890, to 80,000 in 1900, and between 1900 it more than tripled to nearly 250,000.¹⁷

The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition of 1909 brought tens of thousands of visitors to the area. As part of the exposition activities, the public was invited to name the massive trees that grew in Ravenna Springs Park. The tree with the greatest girth was named after Theodore Roosevelt on the day the president visited the park. After refusing to buy Ravenna Park for several years, the City of Seattle acquired the park by condemnation in 1911, and many of the trees were removed, ostensibly for safety purposes.

The popularity of the parks and the availability of public transit encouraged rapid development of the area after the 1909 exposition, which is why many of the remaining houses in the Ravenna and Roosevelt neighborhoods date from 1908 to the early 1920s. Many retain their original Craftsman-style architectural character.

Post A-Y-P Development, 1910- 1930s

To serve the growing population of north Seattle, the Seattle Water Department constructed a pair of water reservoirs, the Green Lake and Maple Leaf reservoirs, between 1910 and 1911.¹⁸ With a combined total storage of 110,000,000 gallons, the reservoirs were originally supplied with Cedar River water via the Volunteer Park Reservoir.¹⁹ Froula Memorial Courts (later Playground) was dedicated in 1939. The small three-acre park is adjacent to the southern side of the Green Lake Reservoir, located south of NE 75th Street and between 12th and 15th Avenues NE.²⁰

By 1915, street railways extended all the way around Green Lake and connected to downtown via the Stone Way Bridge, which was demolished in 1917 after the Fremont Bridge was finished.²¹

The unpaved 10th Avenue that connected to the Bothell Highway (later Lake City Way) is thought to have been informally renamed Roosevelt Way on January 6, 1919, the day the former president passed away, and was officially renamed by the City of Seattle in 1933.²²

Another elementary school, Ravenna (Edgar Blair, City of Seattle Landmark), was completed in 1911. It was north of NE 65th Street and Ravenna Avenue NE, and replaced a portable schoolhouse that had been located at NE 63rd Street and 22nd Avenue in the mid-1890s.²³

A footbridge was constructed across the Ravenna Creek ravine as early as 1915. A streetcar trestle was built across the ravine between Ravenna and Cowen parks in 1924. It was replaced in 1936 by a dramatic concrete arch bridge built as a Works Progress Administration project. The 20th Avenue Bridge over Ravenna Park was completed in 1922.

In September 1924, the first generator at Gorge Dam's powerhouse was turned on and the first current from Seattle City Light's Skagit River Project flowed south to the new North Substation at the northern end of the Roosevelt District.²⁴

Between 1921 and 1922, the school district's third high school, Roosevelt (Floyd A. Naramore, City of Seattle Landmark), was built on a sparsely developed two-block parcel between NE 66th and NE 68th streets and between 12th and 15th avenues NE. The school was named after Theodore Roosevelt; black walnut trees from Roosevelt's Oyster Bay estate in New York were planted on the front lawn of the school. Enrollment in north Seattle was so expansive that the school's enrollment nearly reached the building's capacity in its first year of operation. Within five years of opening, enrollment exceeded capacity.²⁵

Many houses were built in the district in the late teens and early 1920s in response to the opening of the new high school.

The former Denny streetcar line extended northward, first by way of a wooden trestle bridge across the intersection of Ravenna and Cowen parks along the 15th Avenue NE right-of-way, along the eastern side of the new high school, and up to the then-city limits at NE 85th Street.²⁶

Famed Pacific Northwest author Betty MacDonald (Anne Elizabeth Campbell Bard, 1907-1958), lived in the Roosevelt District and graduated from Roosevelt High School in 1924. After an unsuccessful marriage outlined in her most famous book, The Egg and I, MacDonald returned to Seattle and lived with her mother at 6317 15th Avenue NE (now demolished) from 1933 to 1942, a period that was covered in her 1950 book Anyone Can Do Anything. MacDonald's book focused on Depression era life in Seattle. The Ravenna-Cowen neighborhood was impacted by the Depression years as most residential neighborhoods in the United States were. A significant number of houses in the neighborhood were sold or returned to their lenders during this time.

The area was dubbed the Roosevelt District in 1927, eight years after Theodore Roosevelt's death. That same year, a decorative street lighting system was installed along the neighborhood's major arterials.²⁷

The district also constructed an intermediate school, John Marshall (Floyd A. Naramore), on Ravenna Avenue between 1926 and 1927.²⁸

In 1928, Sears, Roebuck & Co. established a store at the corner of NE 65th Street and Roosevelt Way NE. The store stimulated additional commercial development in the area, replacing older residences along NE 65th Street and Roosevelt Way NE. During this period a City Light store (now the Sunlight Café), a grocery store called Rhodes, a Bartell Drugs store, and Van De Camp Bakery were located along Roosevelt Way NE. Sears later expanded the store to the south, replacing the Rhodes store, the drug store and the bakery. The store remained a commercial anchor of the neighborhood until 1980, when Sears closed and was replaced by the Roosevelt Square shopping arcade. The commercial district would expand east-west along NE 65th Street in the 1930s and 1940s. Another small-scale commercial strip developed eastward along NE 65th Street between 20th and 25th Avenues NE, and included a grocery store, a bakery, taverns and a retail plant nursery, among other businesses. In 1969, the storefront at 2261 NE 65th Street became the first successful retail location of the Puget Consumers Co-op (PCC).²⁹

The Aurora Bridge was constructed in 1932; the streetcars tracks were removed in 1941 after the city replaced the streetcars with rubber-tired trolleys. The removal of the streetcars and the development of Aurora Avenue N altered the character of the neighborhood, as highway development brought more commerce to the western side of the lake and cut through Woodland Park and the western portion of the Green Lake neighborhood.

Post-World War II Development, 1940- 1960s

In 1941, Pacific Northwest Bell built a new two-story brick masonry telephone switching station to service the area. The building replaced an earlier telephone switching station that was on the site at 1208 NE 64th Street as early as 1917. The building later was expanded northward and two additional stories were added.³⁰

In 1948, the City of Seattle routed Ravenna Creek into the north trunk sewer, disconnecting it from Lake Washington at Union Bay.³¹ Just nine years later, on November 11, 1957, a massive hole swallowed part of Ravenna Boulevard between 16th and 17th avenues NE.³² The hole appeared when a sewer line broke and washed out thousands of cubic yards of earth.³³ Within a week the cave-in had grown to 60 feet deep, 120 feet wide, and more than 200 feet long.³⁴ The north trunk sewer, originally constructed between 1910 and 1911, runs under Ravenna Boulevard and crosses the University of Washington campus to the Lake Washington Ship Canal, runs west along the canal, getting bigger as other lines join it, until it discharges at Magnolia's West Point.³⁵

In 1957, Seattle received federal funding to extend Interstate 5 through the city.³⁶ The route cut a north-south swath through the Roosevelt District, running between Fifth and Eighth avenues NE, traversing residential areas. The freeway opened for traffic in 1962.³⁷ Reaction to the freeway among neighborhood residents and business owners was mixed. Some felt the freeway cut off the neighborhood and lamented the destruction of more than 200 local homes; others saw it as a boon to businesses, easing surface street congestion and bringing more customers in to shops.³⁸ Concurrently, Roosevelt Way NE was converted to a southbound one-way street, creating a couplet with a northbound 12th Avenue NE.

Many houses appear to have changed hands in the early 1960s, as the generation who had first purchased homes in the neighborhood began to move to retirement housing or pass away.

The Ravenna-Cowen neighborhood suffered from urban decline in the 1960, as more suburban developments drew families out of the city. This flight was later compounded after 1977 when the Seattle School District initiated mandatory busing to better integrate public schools. The District abandoned the busing program in 1999. In the ensuing years an opposite trend from white flight has occurred. Many families of color have been economically priced out of city neighborhoods through gentrification, choosing to relocate to less expensive areas outside of the city. Seattle as a whole has thus seen a significant decrease in racial diversity.

Another significant population and economic dynamic was the Boeing Recession of the nearly 1970s, which as in the Depression of the 1930s resulted in foreclosures or forced sales.

The Roosevelt neighborhood, particularly the area to the south and east of Roosevelt High School along NE 65th Street and 15th Avenue NE has recently suffered from urban decay with deteriorating buildings held by absentee landlords. Many of these properties are presently being redeveloped.

As with many of the close to the Central Business District, single-family neighborhoods in Seattle, housing prices have soared, along with the associated tax rate, forcing many families to reluctantly consider relocating to other more distant neighborhoods or towns.

Due to their proximity to the University of Washington, the Roosevelt District and Ravenna neighborhood continues to attract many university faculty, staff and students as residents. The annual Bull Moose Festival celebrates the community and local businesses.³⁹ This residential neighborhood also exhibits cohesiveness and smaller-scale cooperative neighborhood activities.

In 2007, the Sound Transit board voted to build a light-rail station at 12th Avenue NE, between NE 65th and NE 67th Streets, replacing a QFC grocery store, the first of the chain, which had been on that location since 1955.⁴⁰

The greater neighborhood is currently home to the following landmarked buildings: Roosevelt High School (Floyd A. Naramore, 1922), Dr. Annie Russell House (5721 Eighth Ave NE, Walter G. Frost, ca. 1908), 20th Avenue NE Bridge (Frank M. Johnson, 1913), and Cowen Park Bridge (Clark Eldridge, engineer, 1936).⁴¹

Significant Architects and Builders

A majority of houses in the district appear to have been built for resale as investments. Some designs were based on plans taken or inspired by published plan books, catalogs, or lumberyard plan sets of the day; other designs were provided by architects to a builder or developer for use multiple times. These designs were often used repeatedly with minimal changes made to provide a unique exterior appearance. Similar houses can often be seen in proximity to one another built by the same builder; an example of this are the Dutch Colonial homes at 3012 N 12th Street and 1116 N Cedar, which are similar but with just a bit of variation in their design to make each unique. Some of these architects and builders have been identified, and others have yet to be found. A few high-style houses were designed by architects for specific clients. A brief overview of some of the more prominent local architects and builders has been provided in alphabetical order:

Alfred B. Berg, Builder

Alfred Bratting Berg (1893-1971) was born in Norway in 1893. Besides building the Prairie-style house at 6303 19th Avenue NE, he built houses at 6248 27th Avenue NE, 1615 NE 63rd Street, and 6226 Ravenna Avenue NE. He built for himself a bungalow townhouse apartment court at 1801 E Spruce Street.

Lowell V. Casey, Architect

Lowell Casey was born in Illinois in 1900. Lowell had no college training but apprenticed with various Seattle architects including Joseph S. Cote 1923-1927, Stoddard and Son (1927-1928, Schack, Young & Myers, Arthur Loveless, Charles Haynes, and Albert A. Geiser. He married Flora Allen (1908-1984) who graduated from the University of Washington with a Bachelor of Architecture in 1931. Flora assisted him in his practice from 1932 until his retirement. Casey died in 1971.⁴²

Casey designed the house at 6211 22nd Avenue NE around 1927.

E. W. Chandler, Builder

Eliab Whitney Chandler (1859-1928) built 6315 Brooklyn Avenue NE.

M. L. Conley, Builder

Murry L. Conley (1877-?) was a plasterer and house contractor. He built 6321 17th Avenue NE.

Craftsman Bungalow Company, Builder

The Craftsman Bungalow Company, owned by Seattle's Jud Yoho and with offices in Seattle, New York and Los Angeles, sold, financed, and constructed bungalows. Yoho was also president of Bungalow Magazine, which featured many of his designs. Bungalow homes sold by the Craftsman Bungalow Company were extremely common in Seattle and elsewhere in the teens and 1920s, as developers, contractors and individual home owners constructed houses. Architect Edward L. Merritt, who worked for Yoho, designed many of the houses shown in their catalog. Merritt took over operations of the company in 1915. The company ceased operations with their last published catalog in 1920.⁴³

Robert L. Durham, Architect

Robert Lewis Durham (1912-1998) was born in Seattle and grew up in Tacoma. He received his Bachelor of Architecture from the University of Washington in 1936. After graduation he was employed by E. Dudley Stuart between 1936 and 1937, and by the Federal Housing Authority between 1938 and 1942 as a cost estimator. He worked with Stuart and Paul H. Kirk between 1942 and 1945, designing war housing. In 1945 he formed a partnership with Stuart. He formed Robert L. Durham & Associates in 1951. During this period he designed the Fauntleroy Congregational Church (1951-1952), the First Congregational Church in Bellevue (1952-1953, with John Lindahl), Forest Lawn Mausoleum (1953-1954), and St. James Episcopal Church (1954, altered) in Kirkland. In 1954, Durham advanced David R. Anderson and Aaron D. Freed to partnership, forming Durham,

Anderson & Freed. The firm lasted until Durham retired in 1980, and completed numerous Northwest schools, banks and churches, as well as a few residences. Durham became an AIA Fellow in 1959 and served as the national AIA president in 1968. Durham passed away in Seattle in 1998.⁴⁴

Durham designed 6101 Ravenna Avenue NE for Irving Easton in 1968.

Hamilton Eckert, Architect

Hamilton Eckert (1917-1999) was born in Seattle in 1917.⁴⁵ He graduated from Roosevelt High School in 1936 and attended the University of Washington between 1937 and 1940. He served in the United States Army as a private during World War II. He received his architectural license in 1950, and he was in private practice by 1951. Eckert appears to have specialized in modern apartment building in the 1950s and 1960. Although Eckert's designs were initially rather pedestrian, his later shift toward modernism influenced by other Pacific Northwest architects such as Paul Hayden Kirk and Victor Steinbruek, resulted in a few handsome Northwest Contemporary homes, including 6216 23rd Ave NE in the district.

Carl F. Gould, Architect

Carl Freylinghausen Gould (1873-1939) was born in New York City in 1873. He lived in New York City and Tarrytown, NY, before attending Harvard University. Gould spent five years in Paris, attending the École des Beaux-Arts, before moving back to New York, where he worked between 1903 and 1905 for McKim, Mead & Wright, architects. In 1906 he worked for D. H. Burnham on a new urban plan for San Francisco, and later worked with former classmate James Otis Post on the design of the Wisconsin State Capitol. Between 1906 and 1907, he formed a brief architectural partnership under the name Carpenter, Blair & Gould. Gould moved to Seattle in 1908, where he worked briefly for architects Everett & Baker. Gould went into partnership with Daniel Huntington between 1909 and 1911, although he also continued to practice independently. In 1914 he and Charles H. Bebb formed a partnership that lasted from 1914 to 1939. In 1914 Gould founded the University of Washington's Department of Architecture and used his connections with the University's administration to obtain 18 building commissions on the Seattle campus. Gould was responsible for the design of many of Seattle's mansions, as well as commercial buildings including the Times Square Building (1913-1915), the Administration Building (1914-1916) at the Hiram Chittenden Locks, the U.S. Marine Hospital (1930-1932, altered), and the Seattle Asian Art Museum (1931-1933).⁴⁶

Carl Gould designed the house at 1206 NE 61st Street

Graham & Myers, Architect

David J. Myers was born in Glasgow, Scotland on December 24, 1872. Myers arrived in Seattle with his family shortly after the fire of 1889. After working in several Seattle firms up until 1894, he left to study architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He worked in firms in Boston and Pittsburgh before returning to Seattle in 1905. Upon his return, he joined the firm of John Graham, Sr. as a junior partner. He practiced with Graham as the principal designer for five years and then opened an independent practice in 1910. Myers was involved in design work for civic, religious, residential and commercial projects and taught architecture as a faculty member of the University of Washington from 1917 to 1920.⁴⁷

Graham & Myers designed the house at 1221 NE 61st Street.

Elmer Green, Architect

Elmer Ellsworth Green (1861-1928) was born in Minnesota arriving in Seattle in 1903. By 1908 he was practicing architecture, specializing in Craftsman style houses. He published the Practical Plan Book in 1912, which included 60 house plans. He designed numerous houses in Seattle, and also practiced in Victoria, B. C. Green designed the house at 6308 17th Avenue NE.

Okey J. Gregg, Architect

Okey Joseph Gregg (1880-1963) was born in Missouri and came to Seattle in 1904 where he began building houses. He designed several houses in the University District, including the Mission Revival style house at 5269 17th Avenue NE and 5225 17th Avenue NE. He also designed a warehouse in Wallingford and houses in Madison Park, Magnolia, Mt. Baker and Queen Anne. One of his best-known projects was the Sol Duc Hot Springs Resort in Olympia National Park. He bought Sound Construction & Engineering Company in 1947 and served as its president until he retired in 1947. Gregg died in California in 1963.

In the district, Gregg is known to be responsible for the design of 6400 Brooklyn, 6403 Brooklyn, 6320 16th Avenue NE, and 1738 NE 62nd Street.

Gardner J. Gwinn, University Construction Company, Builder

Gardner J. Gwinn (1888-1959) grew up in Nova Scotia, Canada, in a family of builders. He started his own construction company in Seattle in 1913, and quickly grew his company into a large operation, employing more than 150 workers in 1924. He published a series of plan books titled "Homes of Individuality." His success gave him the ability to purchase large tracts of land, including 44 houses in Cowen's University Park tract, and others in Ravenna, University Place, Ridgemont addition Gwinn Addition, North Broadway and Bothell. After 1924, Gwinn began developing apartment buildings, constructing more than 50 before the Depression.⁴⁸

In the district Gwinn is known to be responsible for building 6304 19th Avenue NE, 6103 Brooklyn Avenue NE, 6403 Brooklyn Avenue NE, 6322 22nd Avenue NE, and 2206 NE 63rd Street.

Charles Haynes, Haynes & Cantin, Architect

Charles L. Haynes was born in California in 1807. Before moving to Seattle in 1907, Haynes worked for San Francisco architect Alexander Cantin. In Seattle he designed a variety of buildings from apartment houses to warehouses, to commercial buildings, single family residences and automobile showrooms. Like many architects during the early 20th century, Haynes completed designs in a variety of eclectic styles ranging from Spanish Eclectic to Neo-Classical. Working as the architect for the Hunter Improvement Company, Haynes prepared plans for over one-hundred homes to be erected by the company in the Mount Baker neighborhood. Several of Haynes designs were published in Bungalow Magazine and his Prairie style home for the Margaret Calvert (1913) was well published, bringing him further commissions. Haynes also designed many apartments in Seattle including the Roy Vue Apartments (1924); Dunlap Apartments (1929); Brooklyn Building (1930); Narada Apartments (1925); Bonair Apartments (1925).⁴⁹

Charles Haynes was the architect for 6303 21st Avenue NE

Carl Hedeon/Hedeon Construction Company, Builder

Carl Hedeon (1884-1969) was born in Sweden in 1884 and immigrated to the United States in 1901. He moved to Seattle around 1907 and worked as a carpenter on the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition.⁵⁰ Hedeon built several houses around the University District and the Ravenna-Cowen neighborhoods before forming the Hedeon Construction Company around 1920. In 1922 he moved into an office in the American Bank Building, while maintaining his own house at 6523 18th Avenue NE as his University District office.⁵¹ Most of the houses he constructed from the late teens through the 1920s were either Colonial Revival or Prairie style. In 1917, Hedeem hired architect Andrew C. Willatsen to design 1738 NE Naomi Place, and may have employed Willatsen to design other houses.⁵² In 1924, Hedeem was hired as the contractor for the Clubhouse (Daniel R. Huntington, architect, Daughters of the American Revolution) which was modeled after George Washington's Mount Vernon.⁵³ In 1931, he constructed the Elber Arms at 2442 10th Avenue N.⁵⁴ During the Great Depression when very little construction was undertaken, Hedeem became a superintendent for the West Coast Construction Company.⁵⁵ He retired in 1960, and passed away in 1969.

Homes built by Carl Hedeem included 1738 NE Naomi Place, 1711 NE 63rd Street, 1717 NE 63rd Street, 1721 NE 63rd Street.

Harry E. Hudson, Architect

Harry Elijah Hudson (1881-1963) was born in New London, Minnesota in 1881. He moved to Seattle in 1904. Hudson listed himself as a general contractor in the 1910 United States Census and as an architect in the 1920 census. According to the 1940 census, the highest grade of school Hudson completed was the fourth year of high school. Nevertheless, Hudson designed many notable apartment buildings in the Denny Regrade area, including the Lexington Concord and the Paul Revere apartments. He was financially involved with his brother, John S. Hudson, in the Colonial Investment Company, and later worked as a real estate broker. Upon his retirement Hudson was elected to the King County Board of Recreation.

Hudson designed the house at 6223 Brooklyn Avenue NE.

Home Building Company, Builder

The Home Building Company was operated by A. F. Nichols and G. Clinton Bennett. They were speculative builders and financiers, funded through the sale of stock at a guaranteed six percent interest.⁵⁶

The Home Building Company was involved with the construction of 1711 and 1728 NE Naomi Place.

Paul Hayden Kirk, Architect

Paul Hayden Kirk (1914-1995) was born in Utah in 1914 and moved to Seattle with his family in 1922. The family lived within the district at 6327 21st Avenue NE. Kirk graduated from Roosevelt High School in 1932, and received his Bachelor of Architecture from the University of Washington in 1937. After graduation Kirk worked for a number of architects, including Floyd Naramore, A. M. Young, B. Dudley Stuart, and Henry Bittman. He started his own practice in 1939 and began designing homes for his older brother, Blair Kirk, a building contractor. Kirk constructed a home for himself in 1944 at 6216 Ravenna Avenue NE (altered). In 1944 Kirk formed a partnership with James J. Chiarelli, which produced a number of modern structures including the Crown Hill Medical-Dental Clinic (1947), the Hammack House in Edmonds (1946), the Dr. Schueler House (1947) in Port Angeles, a variety of buildings at Camp Nor'wester (1946-62, Now a Paul Allen retreat) on Lopez Island, the Lakewood Community Church (1949), and homes in Bellevue's Norwood Village (1951). He practiced independently between 1950 and 1957. During this time, his designs for single-family residences displayed characteristics of the International Style with flat roofs, bands of windows and simple cubic shapes. Noteworthy examples include the Lewis Dowell House (1954) in Seattle, the George Tavernites House (1952) in Seattle, the Lake City Clinic (1952), Group Health Cooperative Northgate Clinic (1958), the Blakeley Clinic (1957), and the University Unitarian Church (1959). Many of Kirk's residential work during this time gained national attention. Among them were the Frank Gilbert House (1957) in the Highlands, the Bowman House (1956) in Kirkland and the Evans House (1956) on Mercer Island.⁵⁷

In 1960 he formed a partnership with Donald S. Wallace and David A. McKinley, known as Kirk, Wallace, McKinley & Associates, which took on larger projects that included the University of Washington Faculty Club (1960, with Victor Steinbrueck), the Magnolia Branch of the Seattle Public Library (1963), the Japanese Presbyterian Church (1963), the French Administration Building at Washington State University (1967), Edmond Meany Hall at University of Washington (1974), the IBM Office Building (1965) in Spokane, and the Alexander Graham Bell Elementary School (1967) in Kirkland. Kirk's work was widely published. Between 1945 and 1970, his designs were included in more than 60 articles in various national architectural publications. His work was respected both locally and nationally, and in 1959 Kirk was elected as a Fellow of the AIA. In 1976 he was elected into the National Academy of Design as an Associate member and acquired full membership in 1994.

Norman P. Lacy, Builder

Norman Peter Lacy (1869-1916) was born in Wyandotte, Michigan, the son of a brick mason. By 1907 he had moved with his family to Seattle, where he built the Boyer House (1907-1908, 1617 Boyer Avenue, City of Seattle Landmark). In 1909, Lacy constructed 1732 NE Naomi Place for his family and probably is also responsible for the construction of the adjacent house at 1728 NE Naomi Place. He listed his occupation as a contractor in the 1910 United States Census. Lacy passed away in 1916.

Stanley Long/Long Building Company, Builder

James Stanley Long (1883-1959) was a contractor in several Seattle neighborhoods and built houses for more than 50 years. Although his early houses were primarily Craftsman bungalows, in the 1920s he adopted revival styles. In 1926 he constructed 25 Tudor homes in the Montlake neighborhood on E Blaine Street, marketed as "Victorian Village." The houses were a mixture of Tudor Revival and French Norman and had names such as "The Alexandria" and "The Stratford." He also completed several homes in the "Varsity Villas" area of Montlake, along Lake Washington Boulevard. Long was a lawyer by training but marketed himself as a designer (although he never received a formal license). He may have had architects working for his building company as well.⁵⁸

The Long Building Company constructed a number of houses in the district including 6308 17th Avenue NE, and 6315 17th Avenue NE.

William Lucas/Wm. Lucas Building Company, Builder

William Mortimer Lucas (1857-?), the owner of the Wm. Lucas building Company, was born in Illinois.⁵⁹ Between 1908 and 1913 he was a speculative builder of houses in Seattle's north end, houses that were financed by the sale of stock.⁶⁰ Lucas and his company were involved in the construction of at least three homes in the district, including 6303 and 6307 16th Avenue NE and 6311 17th Avenue NE, all Craftsman bungalows.⁶¹ His office was located in the White Building in downtown Seattle.⁶² By 1912, the company was also selling plans for bungalows.⁶³

Lucas Building Company's homes in our district include 6303 17th Avenue NE, 6307 16th Avenue NE, and 1718 NE 62nd Street.

Donald McDonald (1880-1963) was born in Ontario, Canada. He was a carpenter by trade, but also built at least one house in the district, 6323 16th Avenue NE.

George Millroy, Builder

George Millroy (1883-?) was born in Wisconsin and was originally a plumber by trade. He also built a number of houses in the district, including 6414 Brooklyn Avenue NE, 6319 19th Avenue NE, and 1316 NE 62nd Street.

Herbert E. Smith, Builder/Developer

Herbert E. Smith (1879-1939) was an accountant and with his father was responsible for the construction of a number of houses in the district, including 6329 17th Avenue NE, 1919 NE Naomi Pl, 1901 NE Naomi Place, NE Naomi Place, and 6274 19th Avenue NE.

John R. Sproule, Architect

John Robert Sproule (1908-1993) was born in Winnipeg, Canada. He moved to Tacoma with his family in 1919, graduating from Stadium High School in 1930. Sproule received his Bachelor of Architecture from the University of Washington in 1934. After graduation, between 1934 and 1936, he worked for architect J. Lister Holmes and Paul Thiry. He received his license to practice architecture in 1937 and entered private practice. Sproule designed residences in the Modern style. Among his first projects was the Smith House (1936), a split-entry, three-level Modernist house. During World War II he worked for the Office of Civilian Defense and Scientific Research & Development Program at Princeton University. Sproule also was part of a joint venture to design the Holly Park Public Housing Project with Paul Thiry, Fred Ahlson and John Paul Jones. In 1948, Sproule became an instructor at the University of Washington. He was promoted to assistant professor in 1951 and full professor by 1960. Later projects include the Ballard Animal Hospital (1955, with Victor Steinbrueck), and the Park Drive Apartments (1956). Sproule retired from the University in 1978 and passed away in 1993.⁶⁴

John Sproule designed 6211 23rd Avenue NE.

George B. Taylor, Taylor Construction Company, Builder

George B. Taylor (1893-?) was a plasterer and contractor. He built the house at 1301 NE 63rd Street.

Gus Thelberg, Builder

Gustave Thelberg (1862-1943) was a native of Sweden who immigrated to the United States in 1884.⁶⁵ He resided in Minnesota before arriving in Seattle around 1920, where he worked as a cabinetmaker.⁶⁶ He built the district's only brick Georgian Revival residence, at 1220 Brooklyn Avenue NE, in 1925.⁶⁷

John R. van Emelen, Developer/Builder

John R. van Emelen (1879-1947) was born in Illinois. He constructed a number of houses between 1905 and 1925 in the Green Lake, Wallingford, and Denny Blaine neighborhoods and at least one house in the district, 6310 16th Avenue NE.

Fred D. Wiseman, Builder

Fred D. Wiseman (1869-1945) was born in Iowa. He was a carpenter by trade and also built houses including at least one house in the district, 1329 NE 63rd Street.

Andrew C. P. Willatsen, Architect (1876-1974)

Andrew Christian Peter Willatsen (a.k.a. Willatzen) was born in northern Germany in 1876 and immigrated to the United States in 1901. By 1902 he was working in Frank Lloyd Wright's Oak Park, Illinois, studio, soon becoming a valued apprentice. By 1907, Willatsen had relocated to Spokane, and was employed by the prestigious architectural firm of Cutter & Malmgren. The following year he moved to Seattle to supervise the construction of the Seattle Golf and Country Club (1908) at the Highlands community north of Seattle. In 1909, Willatsen joined former Wright apprentice Francis Barry Byrne (1882-1967) in a partnership that resulted in

Verbal Boundary Description (Describe the boundaries of the property.)

The district's northern boundary is bordered by the arterial NE 65th Street, excluding previously developed and currently developing commercial properties, by a natural ravine leading into Ravenna Park on the east, by the adjacent Ravenna and Cowen parks on the south, and by the arterial 12th Avenue NE on the west.

Boundary Justification (Explain why the boundaries were selected.)

These boundaries enclose the core of a historic single-family neighborhood largely developed as the result of the 1909 Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition and later the construction of Roosevelt High School between 1921 and 1922. Boundaries are either street arterials or natural features.

THE SEATTLE SUNDAY TIMES, MARCH 10, 1907.

You Are Dead Asleep Wake Up and Get Busy

F. L. Stiles, the wide awake real estate operator, purchased seven lots in COWEN'S UNIVERSITY PARK yesterday at $1,150 each and has already refused $1,500 per lot.

Some people are beginning to wake up to the fact that real estate in the vicinity of the University is far below its value, yes more than one-quarter below its real value. In just about six months, when the Exposition buildings are under construction, you will wonder why you hadn't purchased at the present low prices.

A Few Hundred Dollars

Invested in COWEN'S UNIVERSITY PARK may mean a FORTUNE for you some day and that day may not be very far off. If you don't get out to the University now you will very soon be with the rest of the crowd. Why not go out now and make some quick money?

Cowen's University Park

Has decidedly been the record breaker—65 lots in three hours and over half the addition sold in less than a week.

Take the University car right away and get off at 58th Street.

Prices of lots are exceedingly low and terms very easy.

Mr. Charles Cowen has just returned to the city after a very serious illness. He has been ordered away for a year's rest by his physician, and in order to dispose immediately of Cowen's University Park, Mr. Cowen has authorized us to sell, at a special reduction of 20%, the remaining lots in this beautiful addition.

This property is surrounded by the most BEAUTIFUL PARKS in the State of Washington; convenient to two car lines, and only a short walking distance from the University, THE CENTER OF EDUCATION AND CULTURE, and soon to be THE CENTER OF THE GREATEST ACTIVITY known in the history of Seattle.

All improvements were made under city supervision, and the addition was laid out in Park style, with an eye to the BEAUTIFUL.

Note the terms: One-Third Cash, One-Third in Nine Months, and One-Third in Eighteen Months. The sale opens Monday.

I Am Offering 100 Lots in Cowen's University Park at the Amazingly Low Price of $850 Each!
Taxes and assessments fully paid. It doesn't need any inside knowledge of real estate values to appreciate what a sacrifice this means to me.

The Reason for This Startling Announcement—

To people who know anything about the value of property in Cowen's University Park, this announcement will be startling. It should be so. I mean it to be so.

After five years of retirement from business activity, I am coming back into the field and I want to make my return noticeable. I want to "get things going" in Seattle. I believe that the city is on the threshold of its greatest development. I believe that the best way to start things is to give people a real chance to make money and to make it quickly.

The property on which I am making this astonishing figure has never before been offered at less than from $1,150 to $1,375 per lot. Buyers at those figures made good purchases. The lots are worth that much and more.

1906—and Now—

In 1906 the Lake Washington Coast was only a board for achievement, still a problem; the Alaska Building was the only tall building in the city; Seattle's bank deposits, now over $100,000,000, were then only $10,000,000. The lines of the "Millwaukee" and the Union Pacific Railroads (the Seattle) were only prospects; the great scheme of harbor development, now assured, was then only a hope. If thought of at all, I have watched these wonderful changes from the side lines. I cannot believe that our people can longer be indifferent to the practical significance of these great forward strides. The whole tendency of events points to so early return to a normal market for Seattle real estate. When we reach that time, then coming, lots in Cowen's University Park should be worth several times the price at which they have been sold, and owners of lots there, bought at $1,150 to $1,375, will realize handsomely on their investments. Cowen's University Park is situated in the heart of Seattle's Park center, and in direct line of Seattle's growth. I know how good the investment is, for I have wanted to make it what is known as the choicest residential district in Seattle.

This offer means to me, as you can see, a sacrifice of time, money, and energy. But it means an opportunity to you, and I want to be the one to offer that opportunity.

TERMS OF SALE
are $100 down, with balance arranged for in payments over a period of two years.

Take Cowen Park car or Ravenna Park car to Cowen Park. Salemen will be on the ground to show you the lots. Every lot is staked, with the number of the lot. An abstract will be furnished with each lot. Applications will be received in order until the 100 lots are sold. (Telegraphic orders will be filled in the order of this receipt). BIG COMPANY TO BUILD 100 HOMES

American Mortgage and Building Company, Seattle Home Builders, Are Busy People—Will Build 100 Homes in Cowen's University Park Addition.

With the opening up of real estate and building activities in Seattle, the American Mortgage and Building Company has taken its position to the front in new quarters on the ground floor of the White Building, Fourth and Union.

Our principal business is home building. We plan and construct "classy" up-to-the-minute houses, bungalows and cottages at lowest possible cost, quality always considered, and we sell them on payments like rent. It is a part of our business to help you get just what you want in a home—let us have your sketch and floor plan and our architect will make up a working plan—no charge.

100 New Homes in Cowen's University Park Addition

To sell 100 homes in Cowen's Park Addition, and do it quickly we are going to help you, Mr. and Mrs. Home Buyer, to own your own place. Now, here is a pointed question:

CAN YOU WRITE?

To impress the fact that the American Mortgage & Building Company builds and sells homes on easy payments, we are going to give you some writing to do, and we will pay you handsomely for doing it.

Sharpen Your Pencil and Earn the Money

See how many times you can write the following words: "American Mortgage and Building Co. sell homes, terms like rent," on one (1) side of a standard size 3 1/2 x 5 1/4-inch postal card.

To the person writing the above words as specified the greatest number of times, a cash credit prize of $250 will be given.

To the second best a cash credit prize of $200.

To the third best a cash credit prize of $150.

To the next best twenty (20) a cash credit prize of $50 each will be given.

The prizes won are to be applied like cash as part of the first payment on a new home.

RULES OF CONTEST.

- 1.—The words, "American Mortgage and Building Co. sell homes, terms like rent," must be written clearly in full, no abbreviations or writing across lines already written.
- 2.—Each contestant to correctly specify how many times the lines have been written on his card.
- 3.—Contest closes April 26, 1913, at 6 o'clock p. m.
- 4.—None but 3 1/2 x 5 1/4-inch postcards to be used.
- 5.—All successful competitors will be notified by mail.

PHENOMENAL SALES

University Scenic Addition Receives Great Amount of Attention

Discriminating Purchasers Appreciate High-Class
Proposition—Addition Is Now One-Third Sold.
Improvements Paid—Prices $700 and Up—Easy Terms.

As unqualified and flattering endorsement has been given to University Scenic Addition by discriminating purchasers, one-third of this addition having already been sold. Practically every prospective purchaser who has visited University Scenic Addition, has selected and made a payment on at least one lot. Some have purchased three and four, and every one who has purchased either one or four has wished that they were able to handle more, as they realize and know that the property is low in price, that it is bound to rapidly rise in value, that it is an excellent opportunity to secure a home site in a most desirable and high class residence district at a medium price.

The addition lies high and slightly, commanding a view of the Olympic and Cascade Ranges of mountains, Green Lake, Lake Washington and Union Bay, and adjoins Ravenna Park. It is only 600 feet from the University car line. This line is being double tracked, the road bed is being made firmer and better, all jogs, turns and grades insofar as possible are being eliminated, all of which will materially reduce the running time. Moreover two new franchises have been granted the Seattle Electric Company which will affect this district.

These improvements are guaranteed—street grade, cement sidewalk and water mains. Adequate building restrictions are required.

We could write on and enumerate enough advantages—and valid ones—in 800 a page, but it is not necessary to do so in advertising ink as property in University Scenic Addition sells itself if you but see it. Prices are $700 and up. Terms easy.

Free illustrated circular upon application at our office, or mailed upon request.

Balance of Property Soon to Be Withdrawn From Market Until Improvements Are Completed—Prices Then Raised—
Choice Lots Remaining

That University Scenic Addition will rapidly develop into a high-class residence district is absolutely proven, the Seattle Realty & Improvement Company having purchased twelve lots and already commenced to excavate. Mr. Lucas, the president and manager, who has built a great number of the largest and most beautiful residences in Thompson's University Addition, states that the company will soon have completed a number of very fine houses in University Scenic Addition.

Although over half of this addition is now sold, there are many choice and slightly lots remaining. The surveyors are working rapidly on the profiles and levels, which they will soon have completed, at which time contracts for improvements will be let. These improvements—grade, cement walks and water mains—will be put in under city supervision, at no cost to the purchaser.

Prices are from $700 up, on easy terms.

The balance of the unsold lots will very soon be withdrawn from the market until all improvements are completed, when the prices will be raised.

For further particulars call at our office, 44-45 Haller Building, or take the University car to Scenic Station, Fifteenth Avenue N. E. and E. Fifty-ninth Street. A salesman will be there to show you the property.

ENTIRE DISTRICT ON TAX DELINQUENT LIST

Holders of Improvement Bonds Want
Money—Property Owned by County
Commissioner Carrigan.

City Treasurer Ed L. Terry has asked the finance committee of the council what steps are to be taken toward the collection of delinquent assessments for improvements in the University Place Addition. The records show that all of the property is owned by M. J. Carrigan, county commissioner, and by James E. White.

The total frontage of the improvement was 2,666 feet and the owners of that amount signed the petition, and 300 per cent was the figure put on the improvement, which would amount to $4,880 as the total of the assessment. Bonds were issued on August 8, 1908, and no part of the assessment has been paid up to date. The first installment became due on July 21, 1909, and then was certified to the county treasurer for collection.

"The first interest coupons on these bonds became due on August 8, 1909," Treasurer Terry says, "and there being no funds on hand to meet the same, the district is in default. In the meantime the holders of the bonds are demanding the payment of overdue coupons."

PLAN TO EXTEND STREET TO PACIFIC HIGHWAY

Councilman E. L. Blaine Introduces Resolution to Pave Permanent Way and Construct Steel Bridge.

A. J. GODDARD SAYS HE WILL OPPOSE PROJECT

Declares Tax Commissioner
Carrigan Wants Improvement in Order to Open Way to City Addition.

Connection of a paved thoroughfare with the Pacific Highway at the intersection of East Sixty-fifth Street and Ravenna Avenue, by the construction of a steel bridge over Ravenna Park at Twentieth Avenue Northeast, and the paving of about a quarter of a mile of streets, is provided for in a resolution introduced at the council meeting yesterday afternoon by Councilman E. L. Blaine and referred to the street committee for consideration Thursday afternoon.

This is the second attempt that has been made by the council to make a connection with the state road at the city limits at East Sixty-fifth Street, and will be urged by the Seattle Automobile Club and others who have sought the connection for months, claiming that to the north the streets over which connection may be made with the state road are at times impassable and never in the condition that they should be kept in order to form a continuous highway from the south to the north.

Councilman A. J. Goddard, chairman of the street committee, has announced his intention of opposing this newest plan for a connection with the highway, claiming that the grades are not suitable, that it will be impossible to obtain an appropriation of from $20,000 to $25,000 from the general fund, and lastly that the plan is one of State Tax Commissioner M. J. Carrigan to gain access to his University Place addition at the intersection of Twentieth Avenue Northeast and East Sixty-fifth Street.

The King County commissioners already have agreed to pay $20,000 toward the construction of a steel bridge on Twentieth Avenue Northeast, and Goddard contends that the improvement plan will fail for the reason that the remainder of the money needed cannot be obtained from the general fund, and because of the character of the improvement cannot be raised by the formation of an improvement district.

Urged By Auto Club.

Nearly two months ago representatives of the automobile club appeared before the street committee and urged the paving of Fourteenth Avenue Northeast between East Fiftieth Street and Meadow Drive; Meadow Drive between Fourteenth Avenue Northeast and Brooklyn Avenue; Brooklyn Avenue between Meadow Drive and East Sixty-fifth Street and East Sixty-fifth Street between Brooklyn Avenue and Ravenna Avenue. A resolution to this effect was introduced and indefinitely postponed, largely through the opposition of Carrigan, according to Goddard. This improvement it was estimated would cost in the neighborhood of $20,000, and would provide a connection between the city and the boulevard system and the Pacific highway on an easy grade.

Goddard insists that this improvement would have been under way had not Carrigan raised an objection, simply as he says because the plan now proposed will better serve the Carrigan addition.

Councilman Blaine, who introduced the resolution yesterday, was given assurances by Carrigan that the county commissioners could be depended upon for a larger donation than $25,000, and that the remainder of the cost, estimated at about $60,000, could be raised by the creation of an improvement district.

Consideration of the newest plan for a connection of city and county highways to the north will be given by the street committee Thursday afternoon.

PLAN SIXTY HANDSOME HOUSES FOR UNIVERSITY PLACE ADDITION

TENTATIVE SKETCH OF SEVEN OF PROPOSED HOMES.

Gardner J. Gwinn has purchased from M. J. Carrigan and James E. White sixty lots in the University Place Addition for $60,000 and this summer will construct sixty homes there involving an expenditure of $300,000. Work already has been started. The handsome row of houses shown in the picture are reproduced from tentative drawings and may be considered as typical of the average house that will be constructed in this addition, although more expensive houses will be built. The cost of the sixty homes to be constructed will range from $4,000 to $7,000. The territory in which they will be built extends from 20th Avenue Northeast to Ravenna Avenue and from Naomi Place to 66th Street.

Seattle Daily Times, April 27, 1919, p. 98

WILL BUILD SIXTY FINE RESIDENCES

Gardner J. Gwinn Buys All
Unimproved Lots in University Place Addition.

CONSIDERATION $60,000

Gardner J. Gwinn, 6083 Brooklyn Ave., yesterday completed negotiations for the purchase from M. J. Carrigan and James E. White of sixty large residence lots in their improved plat, University Place Addition, for a consideration of approximately $60,000, and will immediately proceed to construction there of sixty modern homes.

This transaction, which covers all of the remaining lots in this attractive addition in the University District, lying just north of Roosevelt Park, comprises the greater part of all of the property in the district between 20th Avenue Northeast and Ravenna Avenue, Naomi Place, extended, and East Sixty-fifth Street.

East Sixty-third Street, one of the main paved arterial highways of the city, and which here forms a portion of the Pacific Highway, runs directly through the center of the six city blocks embraced in this purchase. All of the lots are in shape for immediate improvement, with graded streets, water, gas and sewers.

Harmony in Design.

Mr. Gwinn's plans for the improvement of this property are altogether out of the ordinary. Every house will be designed with a view to complementing its neighbor. It is announced, and there will be no freak construction, no architectural discords. Every house will have a character of its own. The homes will range in price from $4,000 to $7,000.

Eighteen of these new residences will be built fronting on the paved boulevard, East 63rd Street; six on 20th Avenue Northeast; eighteen on 21st Avenue Northeast, and eighteen on 22nd Avenue Northeast.

Mr. Gwinn recently completed fif-

Park-Ravine Project Protested

CONTROVERSIAL PROJECT: A bulldozer today pushed fill dirt into Cowen Park's ravine. Some residents nearby are protesting bitterly they have "had their fill" of the project. They want the park preserved in its former natural state. (See Pages A and B.)

General Comments

Building Descriptions:

1. All of the buildings noted this nomination were found to be of light wood frame construction, conventional residential framing practices, with a finished exterior façade or veneer of wood, stucco or brick unless noted otherwise. No solid masonry construction other than for chimneys was found.
2. Foundations are assumed to be of poured in place concrete or concrete block unless noted otherwise.
3. While the majority of the structures within the district especially those built before WWII originally sported a cedar shingle or shake roofs at the time of their construction, most roofs within the district have been converted to a composition roofing shingle system unless noted otherwise.
4. Typical window construction within the district utilized solid wood construction. Double hung windows are one over one design, unless noted otherwise.
5. Exterior finish materials have been assumed to be original or replaced over time with like materials unless noted otherwise.
6. The term "Tuscan" column has been used to describe columns that are simpler in design than a Roman Doric column, inspired by but in most cases does not meet the proportional requirements of width to height of either Tuscan or classical Doric columns.

Continuation Sheets / Individual Properties

Ravenna-Cowen North Historic District

Site ID: 12-5902

Address: 5902 12th Avenue NE

Parcel No: 1798000075

Built: 1919

Style: Colonial Revival

Architect: Not Identified

Classification: Historic Contributing

Historic Names: Hocking House

Original Owner(s):

Source: PSRA, KCA, ST

Sub Group: Dutch Colonial Two Story

Builder/Contractor: Not Identified

Description: This two-story Dutch Colonial Revival has a central gable roof entry porch supported on a pair of square wood-cased columns and flanked by two original wood-sash double-hung tripartite windows. The second floor has a single centrally placed original wood-sash double-hung window flanked by two pairs of original wood-sash double-hung windows. The house has painted horizontal clapboard. The southern end of the house has a flat roof sunroom with original wood-sash windows on three sides. This form of Dutch Colonial Revival house has faux gambrel roofs on each side.

Cultural Data: Thomas James Hocking (1883-1960) was a fuel dealer. His wife Hattie (1888-?) was socially active in the community, hosting meetings at the house for the St. Martin's Mother's Club, the Order of the Amaranth, the Colonial Club, and the Ruth School for Girls. Bert Creighton (1896-1975) was a naval pilot holding the rank of commander in 1944. He served as a pilot in both in WWI and WWII. His wife lived in Seattle for only a short time.

Parcel No: 1787500410

Built: 1913

Style: Craftsman

Architect: Not Identified. E. T. Osborn?

Classification: Historic Contributing

Historic Names: Jacobson House

Original Owner(s): Julius Anthony Jacobson

Source: PSRA 1937, BM 1915, KCA

Sub Group: Front Gable Bungalow

Builder/Contractor: Julius A Jacobson

Description: This one-story front gable bungalow has a side entry adapted well for its siting on a corner lot. The full-width entry porch is sheltered by the house's overhanging gable roof that is supported by ganged heavy-timbered columns and a clinker brick wall. The "L" shaped plan allows for a southern gabled wing also featuring heavy timber supports and a clinker brick lower wall that accesses a patio over an attached garage cut into the house's higher grade.

Cultural Data: This house was featured in Jud Yoho's October 1915 Bungalow Magazine with a full set of specifications. The article lists Julius A. Jacobson as the owner. At that time Jacobson was a manager for Sear Roebuck Company. There was an almost identical house built earlier at 4201 Bagley Avenue in the Wallingford neighborhood. The house plan was added to Sear's kit house catalog in 1915, under the name "The Osborn." There is a possibility that the design could attributed to talented English born architect Edward T. Osborn who worked in Seattle during this period

Sub Group: Side Gable Bungalow

Builder/Contractor: Not Identified

Description: This one-and-a-half-story side gable Craftsman bungalow has a projecting gable roof entry porch on its northern side that is supported on square columns resting on tapered square columns. The entry stairway leads up from the south. The house has lost its original overhangs, bargeboards, and knee braces. The house has also been re-sheathed with vinyl siding and most of the original wood-sash windows have been replaced.

Cultural Data: Samuel Sylvester was vice president of the Sylvester Cowen Investment Company. He was the partner of Charles Cowen the developer, and Sylvester Street, now NE 61st Street, was named after him.

Builder/Contractor: Not Identified

Description: There are two distinct structures on this property: (a) a remodeled 1907 house and (b) a 2008 wood-frame townhouse. Both buildings are part of a complex of rental apartments located on three adjoining lots (6313, 6317, and 6321 15th Avenue NE) that was formed by retaining the house at 6313 15th Avenue NE, demolishing older homes on 6317 and 6321 15th Avenue NE, moving four 2008 townhouses from the Roosevelt light rail site to the three lots in 2012, and remodeling all five buildings to allow additional rental units.

(a) The 1907 hip-roof single-family dwelling has been remodeled and converted to part of the rental apartment complex. This one-story hip-roofed house appears to retain sufficient physical integrity to be a contributing resource.

(b) The 2008 townhouses were built with a vaguely Craftsman styling with overhangs supported by knee braces. Each has been remodeled into a triplex. One of these is located behind the 1907 house. All four townhouses are Non-Historic.

Cultural Data: The townhouses were constructed in 2008 and moved to the current location from the Roosevelt light-rail station construction site in 2012. The site also contains a remodeled 1907 hip-roof converted single-family dwelling that was originally built on the site. Ernest L. Adkins, who owned the house in 1917, was a bridge operator.

Cultural Data: L. M. Lowe (1876) was a physician. Frederick M. Bangasser (1883-1919) and his wife Flora (née McGillivray, 1887-1963) were young farmers in Montana during the time of the 1910 U.S. Census. Whatever dreams they had of continuing along this path were cut short in 1919 when Fred died in the influenza outbreak, leaving Flora and their daughter Dorothy to fend for themselves. Flora earned a degree from the University of North Dakota and got a job as a teacher; she was also postmistress of Norma, N.D. for 11 years. She moved to Seattle in 1936 to be with family. After Flora moved from this address, her daughter's family (Elmer H. Lund) lived here for decades.

The eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee brackets.

Cultural Data: On January 22, 1926, a very sobering ad appeared in the Seattle Times: "Children boarded; comfortable home, best of care; $20/month." One can only surmise that this was a win-win situation born of heartbreaking necessity: those who could not take care of their children in the years leading up to the Great Depression relying on the care of those who needed to find a way to supplement their income. Charles McCoy (1891-1978) was an electrician at a shipyard.

Description: This one-and-a-half-story side gable Craftsman bungalow has a projecting gable roof entry porch on the southern side of the street façade supported on square wood cased columns resting on stucco piers. The entry stairs are located on the northern side of the porch and retain their cheek blocks. The entry doorway has a pair of original wood-sash double-hung windows to the south. A large tripartite group of wood-sash double-hung windows with upper transom is located on the northern side of the street façade. A small gable dormer is located to the north of the porch roof. A recent carport has been added to the southern side of the house. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee braces.

Cultural Data: The Seattle Times' "Inquiring Reporter" found a very literate pedestrian when he was out on his beat on Nov. 18, 1921 when he ran into Charles Little (1886-1957), an automobile salesman who happened to be an avid reader. "What is your favorite book?" was the question of the day. To which Little replied without hesitation, "As long as I can remember, 'Huck Finn' has been my favorite." He claimed to have read it dozens of times.

Cultural Data: Clyde C. Bovee (1866-1953) was a manager of a real estate company. In 1952, amidst the fervor of Senator Joseph McCarthy's attempts to rout out Soviet spies on American soil, Ludmilla and Waldemar Reifschneider, recent German immigrants who had lived in Russia, spoke publicly about conditions in Russia. They recounted the atrocious living conditions the Russian people were suffering, working for gruel instead of wages. The Reifschneiders came to the U.S. in 1951 and lived with friends at 6320 17th Ave NE while Waldemar looked for work as a bookkeeper. They lived at 6319 17th Ave NE (across the street from their friends) for at least a decade at the end of the 1950s.

Cultural Data: Vera Stiteler (née McKinstrey, 1888-1961), widowed by the death of her husband John B. by 1930, nonetheless managed to soldier on, raising children Robert and Virginia (called Betty). Vera participated in civic ladies' clubs, such as the Pro-America Committee (1939). Bob appears to have been a blue-blooded American boy of the 1930s, participating in newspaper guessing games about the outcomes of sporting events and serving as a solid also-ran in citywide sporting contests. His 1942 University of Washington yearbook shows an earnest, bespectacled young man on the cusp of his future. However, many challenges the widowed Vera faced, however, couldn't have prepared her for the loss of her daughter, in 1935, after a short unspecified illness. Vera married a neighbor, Harry B. Berg, in 1945.

The house is sheathed with cedar shingles with a 7"/2" exposure and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by wood corbels.

Cultural Data: Susan A. Gates (née Phillips, 1879-?) was by 1920 the secretary/treasurer of the Edward Curtis Studio. She married Edward H. Gates (1879-?), a salesman, in 1906. Either William F. Calvert (b. 1869), an adding machine salesman, was terribly unlucky, or he had what was euphemistically called a "drinking problem." Calvert was involved in one accident in 1930 while behind the wheel, in which he cut and bruised a teenage pedestrian. He was in another fender-bender in 1940, in which he tried to collect damages. But most tragically, he was the driver in a 1944 car/bus accident in which his wife, Bertha (b. 1877) was killed. Calvert filed a suit asking for $9,400 in damages for the loss of his wife and car; however, in 1945 his suit was denied in the grounds that he was guilty of "contributory negligence."

Description: This one-and-a-half-story front gable Craftsman bungalow has nearly a full-width fully glazed sunroom with an upper deck on the street façade. The deck railing has been modified, although and the sunroom windows with upper transoms that appear to be original. The entry stairway is on the southern side of the sunroom. The gable end has a modified doorway accessing the upper deck. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee braces.

Cultural Data: Milton C. Pennington (1850-1932) was a ticket validator at the Union and King St. stations in 1927. He spent his 47-year career working for the railroads, and claimed to have shaken hands with every president since Lincoln, whose hand he shook as a lad of only 16. He worked on the first passenger train to cross the U.S., traveling from Chicago to Portland in 1883. On that train was Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, who smoked "all the black cigars he pleased."

Description: This one-and-a-half-story Craftsman bungalow has a full-width entry porch sheltered by the main roof overhang that is supported on two massive square wood-cased columns. The central entry stairway retains its original stair cheeks. The deck railing is composed of vertical balusters. The central entry doorway is flanked by two pairs of wood-sash double-hung windows. The house formerly had a shed dormer with four wood-sash windows that was replaced around 2015 by a larger front gable dormer addition. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee brackets. The remodeled house has restored many original features of the lower floor exterior.

Cultural Data: Victor C. Nilson was a carpenter. Raymond O. Watne (1900-1948) was a photo-engraver with the Dexter Engraving Co. at the time of his death in 1948. His son, Eddie Watne, made the news a few years earlier when he corralled two horses in the University District that had wandered three miles from their stable at the Olympic Riding & Driving Academy.

Description: This small, simple Tudor Revival house has a central arched entry door housed in a slightly projecting brick veneered gabled bay. A brick chimney is located to the north of the entry. The main roof ridge runs parallel with the street. On both the northern and southern sides of the street-front façade are a pair of narrow wood-sash leaded-glass casement windows. There is a small projection on the southern side of the entry that is sheltered by an extension of the main roof. Besides the entry and chimney, the rest of the house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding.

Cultural Data: Orphaned at age five and raised by grandparents in Oregon, Ralph Bushnell Potts (1897-1991) went on to accomplish great things in his 93 years. He was a lawyer for 54 years, and founder at age 33 of the New Order of Cincinnati, a "non-partisan" political group that nonetheless had a mission "to reduce government to the size of the taxpayer's purse." Potts and this group helped to shape local and state politics of the day. After retiring from practicing law, Potts turned his creative energy to writing. Among his many books and plays, he was best known for the book "Come Now the Lawyers," a history of Washington state's legal profession. He was a founder of Allied Arts of Seattle, the Northwest Writers Conference and Seattle Repertory Theater.

Builder/Contractor: Not Identified

Description: This one-and-a-half-story side gable Craftsman bungalow has a projecting gable roof entry porch on the southern side of the street façade supported on a pair of squat tapered columns resting on brick masonry piers. The entry stairs are centered on the entry porch. To the north of the porch is an original wood-sash tripartite window with an upper transom light. The upper floor is composed of a gabled "aeroplane" floor. There is a small gable vent directly in front of the upper floor windows causing the windows to "step-up" to accommodate the roof slope. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee braces.

Cultural Data: August C. Kristoferson (1893-1973) and his wife Marie (née Irwin, 1897-1962), settled in this house by 1920. August's father, Alfred, a Swedish immigrant, founded the Kristoferson Dairy Co. in 1898; August later became head of his father's firm and went on to be president of the Washington State Dairy Council. Through a series of mergers, Kristoferson Dairy Co. became Meadowsweet Dairy Co. and later Foremost Foods.

Builder/Contractor: J. H. Jones

Description: This unusual one-and-a-half-story Rustic Craftsman front clipped gable bungalow has a projecting clipped gable bay on the southern side of the street façade and a central entry porch sheltered by a non-original, but historically compatible upper floor balcony. The entry stairway retains its original brick masonry stair cheeks. All windows on the primary façades are original. The house is sheathed with shingles and the roof overhangs are supported on wood corbels.

Cultural Data: J. Harland Bretz, Ph.D. (1882-1981) was a Seattle high school science teacher who earned his Ph.D. in Geology at the University of Chicago in 1913. He became an assistant professor of geology at the University of Washington in 1914, and the following year accepted a faculty offer at the University of Chicago. Bretz became internationally famous for his theory of glacial flooding in Eastern Washington from prehistoric Lake Missoula. Charles Abbot Newhall (1881-1941) and his wife, Esterre Murdo Powell Newhall (1881-1949), lived at this address in the early part of the 20th Century. Newhall was a chemical engineer for the firm of Clyde C. Kennedy, with a special interest in sewage and water waste. He represented the engineers' committee in 1938 on a large public works initiative to put thousands back to work. In 1932, Newhall ran for state senator as the Democratic candidate from the 46th District.

Description: This one-story side gable Craftsman bungalow has a projecting gable roof entry porch on the northern side of the house that is supported on two squat square tapered wood-cased columns resting on brick masonry piers. The entry stairs are located on the southern side of the porch near the center of the house. The porch guardrail consists of vertical slat balusters. The entry doorway is flanked by a pair of large wood-sash windows with upper transoms. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles, and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee braces.

Cultural Data: Herbert A. Jackson, a manager in the export/import business, emigrated to the U.S. from Canada in 1897. He and his wife Virginia were settled in Ravenna by 1920, where they raised their daughters Betty and Virginia. Virginia went on to marry Cmdr. Fritz Gleim, a decorated WW II Naval officer, and Betty became a much-lauded math and Latin teacher at John Marshall Junior High School for over 40 years. More recently, the house has been occupied by the family of Curtis Ebbesmeyer, a distinguished retired professor of oceanography at the University of Washington, whose specialty is the study of flotsam as it relates to climate change.

Cultural Data: Possibly reflecting hard economic times, in 1922 an ad appeared in the Seattle Times for "several university men" to share the upstairs quarters for $12.50/month. This was during the tenure of Walter W. Strong (c.1875-1932) and his wife Rebecca (née Sasnett, 1875-1964). Strong, who started out as a letter carrier for the Atlanta, GA, post office in 1901, rose to become Seattle's Superintendent of Parcel Post by the time of his death in 1932. The Strong's son, Richard, followed in his father's footsteps, retiring in 1964 from the postal service after 46 years. The address was also home to 46th District Representative Theodore S. Turner, (1898-1992) whose term began in 1939. Not all residents of this house had such stellar careers in public service; in 1942, assistant port steward Francis D. Lashbaugh was arrested by the FBI and charged with receiving stolen goods: 14 dozen bed sheets and 11 dozen pillow cases that were property of the Army.

Cultural Data: Arthur D. Barrall (1878-1943) was the Secretary/Treasurer of a wood preserving company. Charles Olson was a bookkeeper for the West Coast Wood Preserving Company. Hand-forged nails purportedly made by this outfit have been found in bridges in California, Washington and Montana. The nails are distinguished by a factory-stamped "WC," followed by a hand-stamped letter/number combination that indicated the type of wood used for the bridge. WCWP operated two plants in the early part of the 20th Century: one at Eagle Harbor, WA (built in 1906); and the other one at Seattle (built 1912). [Source: <http://nailhunter.com/wc.htm>]

Description: This steep roof two-and-a-half story house has a full-width entry porch sheltered by the main roof overhang that is supported on four Tuscan columns. The entry stairway is located on the northern side of the porch. To the south of the entry doorway is a large wood-sash double-hung window. The main roof originally had a gable dormer with an inset balcony. The dormer has been enlarged and the balcony enclosed. Some modifications to this house were in place by the time of a 1961 photo in PSRA files. A dormer was added to the back of the house around 2014, and some additional alterations were made then. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding.

Cultural Data: Fresh from a whirlwind tour of points east, 21-year-old pianist Pauline Falk returned to Seattle to recover from all the "hectic jazz" she had experienced in New York. Pauline's father, Isadore Falk (1873-1928), was a German immigrant who made his career in junk sales.

Description: This one-story side gable Craftsman bungalow has a projecting gable roof entry porch on the northern side of the house that is supported on a pair of square tapered wood-cased columns. The main floor has an original tripartite wood-sash window with an upper leaded-glass transom. A small gable with bargeboards hangs over the main roof. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by wood corbels.

Cultural Data: Harold A. Morton was manager of Traung Label Lithography. Though she was merely a freshman at the University of Washington, Betty Watkins, the daughter of Alex and Flora Watkins, came up with the winning names in a 1942 contest to name the "War Stamp Twins." Betty's entry, which won her a commemorative war-stamp corsage, was the suggestion to name the twins "Will" and "Win."

Description: This one-story Colonial Revival house has a full-width brick masonry entry porch that is partially sheltered by a central low pitched arched roof supported on a pair of original Tuscan columns. The central entry doorway is flanked on both sides by groups of three 15-light French doors. The entry stairway retains its original brick masonry stair cheeks. The two original eyebrow dormers on the main roof were removed at some time in the past. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and all roofs have eave returns.

Cultural Data: The Scott family was a longtime fixture in Ravenna. James D., a certified public accountant (born in Canada ca. 1897), and his wife Helen raised their two children, James M. and Helen E., in the house they occupied for over 40 years. James M. was awarded the Faculty Medal for 1946 as a junior at the University of Washington; this medal is the highest award given for academic achievement. Helen L. Scott, who was a civic leader in numerous ladies' organizations, died in 1965 and James D. remarried. He died in 1982.

Description: This one-story hip-roof Colonial Revival bungalow has a projecting shed roof entry porch roof located to the north of center that is supported by two-pair of brackets. There is a non-original projecting entry deck with a guardrail located in front of the entry doorway. The entry doorway is flanked by two large wood-sash tripartite 12-light casement windows. Another pair of eight-light windows is located near the southern end of the street façade. An eyebrow dormer is located on the main roof above the entry. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding.

Cultural Data: Carl C. Busch (1901-) was an assistant manager for the East Asiatic Shipping Comapny. In 1880, the Washington Egtvets represented "100% of the recorded Egtvets living in the United States" [www.ancestry.com/name-origin?surname=egtvvet]. Peter Egtvet (1851-1919) emigrated from Norway in 1845 and joined the large Scandinavian population in Seattle. His son, Percy Egtvet, born ca. 1901, was quite an athlete: he was recruited to the University of Washington as a high-school track star, and was considered to be a candidate for pentathlon champion of the West Coast. The Egtvets were still in residence in 1953 when Percy set off on a ROTC training mission to Canadian and Alaskan waters. He eventually became a coach for the University of Washington's track team.

Description: This formerly one-story side gable Colonial Revival bungalow has a central recessed entry porch. The entry stairway retains its original stair cheeks, but a small trellis over the stairway has been removed. To the north of the entry is a single wood-sash double-hung window. To the south of the entry is an original tripartite wood-sash 12-over-one double-hung window. This window original had a gable roof directly above it that has been replaced by a gable dormer. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and all roofs have eave returns.

Cultural Data: In 1922, the Spencer B. Kirk family moved to Seattle from Salt Lake City, UT and resided at 6327 21st Avenue NE, a home that they owned. Their son Paul Hayden Kirk, was eight years old at that time, grew up in the Ravenna neighborhood and graduated from nearby Roosevelt High School in 1932. Spencer and Vine Kirk were listed as "interior decorators" in the 1930 US Census (Shaping Seattle Architecture: A Historical Guide to the Architects (ed. Jeffrey Karl Ochsner), University of Washington Press, 1994, pages 297-301.) After graduating from the University of Washington in 1937, Paul Hayden Kirk, FAIA went on to become one of the Pacific Northwest's iconic Modern architects, whose designs were widely published. He was also known for his various civic contributions and his associations with other Pacific Northwest Modern architects. William Robert Moore (1875-1949) was a salesman for the Owen Farlin Company, a real estate investment company.

Description: This one-story hip roof ranch house has good physical integrity. The house has had a deck added to the entry porch and a new stairway has been constructed. The house has a basement garage. The house appears to have its original wood-sash windows and the house is sheathed with Certigroove® cedar shingles.

Cultural Data: Meade Hargiss's (1919-2015, see 6202 21st Avenue NE) name appears in Seattle Times ads for "Styldrite Homes" in the 1940s, so one can surmise that he was a real estate agent or a builder. Though he was the owner of this property in 1945, he does not appear in the census or the city directory as having lived here; it may have been an investment property for him. It is possible he bought the land in 1945, and didn't build until 1947, as PSRA records show that the house was built in 1947.

Cultural Data: Theodore V. Hollis (1899-1968) achieved a measure of notoriety in 1947 when the car he was driving was side-swiped by Emery T. Ringstad, the assistant Seattle postmaster. Ringstad, who had been driving on the wrong side of the road, fled the scene, saying he "feared public opinion." His reward for this was to have the story plastered all over the front page of the Seattle Times. Ringstad had been charged in 1941 with reckless driving for fatally injuring a pedestrian. It seems an ironic twist that Hollis, a mail carrier, was hit by a higher-up in the post office. The verdict against Ringstad: 60 days in jail, a $325 fine, and suspension of his license, signed, sealed and delivered by Judge Roy DeGrief.

Cultural Data: Lois Reese was a saleswoman at Frederick & Nelson. Mr. & Mrs. Chester Feavel were in the news in 1963 as they lamented the closing of the Seattle's 1962 World's Fair. Apparently, schadenfreude was the order of the day, as throngs of Seattleites spent their free time roaming the site of the "demolition-torn fairgrounds," enjoying their lamentation of the spot made up of "mounds of soil and craters where the fair blazed in all its glory," according to the Seattle Times of 2/10/63. "Where are the rides," young Chester Feavel is reported to have asked his parents. Another matron noted that the fair's demise was like "the death of a friend."

Description: This one-story side gable Craftsman bungalow has a recessed porch on its northern side supported on three square wood columns resting on brick masonry piers. The entry stairway retains its original brick masonry stair cheeks. A projecting gable roof bay with a wood-sash tripartite window with upper transom is located on the southern side of the street façade. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee braces. The house was raised about 18 inches to accommodate basement use around 2013, but this was done in a subtle manner that retained the house's character.

Cultural Data: Fred F. Fuss (1888-1970) and his wife Elsie (d.1973), along with their son Fred H., lived at this address for over 50 years. Fred Sr. started off as a butcher; at the time of his death he was the retired owner of the Union Meat Market. After retiring as a meat merchant, Fred Sr. found a second career, this one with live animals: he took a job as trainer for Deep Roots and Storm Born, two horses owned by his son and stabled at Longacres Race Track, which was in operation from 1933-1992.

Description: This one-story side gable Craftsman bungalow has a projecting gable roof entry porch on the southern side of the house that is supported on three squat square tapered wood-cased columns resting on brick masonry piers. The entry stairway is on the northern side of the porch and retains its original brick masonry stair cheeks. The central entry doorway is flanked by a pair of wood-sash windows with upper transom lights. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles with a 2"/7" exposure and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee brackets.

Cultural Data: Dale Clive Mackintosh (1902-1969) was a salesman for the Lundquist-Lilly Company. A very famous dog once lived with its not-so-famous owners at this address, and then met a very sad end. Kogiak, a six-year-old Alaskan "sleigh dog," was Miss Esther Fitch's pet when he was poisoned by an unknown party in 1934. Kogiak was thought of as the neighborhood dog, so much so that schoolchildren routinely wrote essays about him and wept at his demise. Miss Fitch returned home from Mills College to find the invidious crime. Kogiak's grandmother was said to be the fastest sled dog in Alaska; his half-brother was owned by Mrs. Herbert Hoover, and another half-brother was owned by Mrs. John D. Rockefeller III.

Description: This one-story intersecting gables Craftsman bungalow has a projecting gable roof entry porch on the southern side of the house that is supported on two squat square tapered wood-cased columns resting on brick masonry piers. The entry stairway leads down to the north and is sheltered by an original wood trellis. The main floor on the northern side of the street façade has an original tripartite wood-sash window with an upper leaded-glass transom light. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by wood corbels.

Cultural Data: Joseph C. Neville (1847-1922) was retired when he purchased the house. James G Arbuthnot was a University of Washington wrestling and intermural athletics coach.

Description: This one-and-a-half-story Craftsman bungalow exhibits Asian-influences in its styling, as well as good physical integrity. The house has an interesting form of intersecting projecting gables embellished by an upper raised crown detail and well-detailed bargeboards. It retains most of its original wood casement windows. The front porch columns were originally clad with stucco but were rebuilt around 20 years ago and clad in shingles. The upper floor is composed of an "aeroplane" floor.

Cultural Data: The first owners of this house, Frederick Carl Graf (1887-1947) and his wife Guadalupe, sold the house in 1921, probably as a result of their only child having been killed in an automobile accident in 1920. Graf managed a meat packing company. Joseph L. Large (1871-1956) was a steamship purser in 1930.

Builder/Contractor: Not Identified

Description: This unusual one-and-a-half-story Classical Revival bungalow has a recessed entry porch on its northern side with a square wood cased column supporting a hip roof extension sheltering a portion of the entry porch and a sunroom. The sunroom was originally fully glazed with 10-light casement windows separated by three square wood cased columns but has now been altered to have four double-hung windows within a framed wall. The gable end has an original wood-sash Palladian window. The upper gable has a small shed roof infill sheltering the Palladian window. The lower portion of the house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and the gable end is sheathed with cedar shingles.

Cultural Data: Rev. Francis E. Drake (1844-1917), a Methodist minister and Civil War veteran, had been a Seattle resident since 1889 when he succumbed in 1917 to a long paralytic illness. Previously, he had served in Company F, 4th Michigan Infantry, until his discharge in 1865. While in Seattle, he served as pastor in at least 5 local jurisdictions. His daughter Maude Drake was living in the house when she applied for a building permit for the garage in 1924.

Description: This one-and-a-half-story side gable Craftsman bungalow has a projecting gable roof entry porch on the northern side of the house that is supported on two squat square tapered wood-cased columns resting on brick masonry piers. The entry porch is partially recessed. The main floor has a central original tripartite wood-sash window with upper transom flanked by two narrow wood-sash windows. The main roof has a gable roof vent located a little south of the entry porch roof, and a small front gable second level aeroplane section located near the southern side of the house. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by corbels. Similar to 2206 NE 63rd Street.

Cultural Data: Effie Mack (1868-1945) was the widow of William H. Mack (1861-ca. 1910) a house carpenter. Hugo Ringstrom (1890-1978), a chemist, was born in Minnesota to a Swedish farming family who had immigrated to the U.S. in 1887. By 1930, Hugo and his wife Katherine (1902-1952) and their two daughters, Adelle and Lois, had joined the rapidly expanding population of Scandinavians who had settled in the Seattle area. Katherine was active in University Christian Church, and her daughter Adelle followed in her footsteps, becoming appointed a delegate in the United Student Christian Council in Geneva, Switzerland while still a freshman at the University of Washington.

The house is sheathed with cedar shingles and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee braces.

Cultural Data: Lucy M. Hughes (ca.1878-1970), a widowed public-school teacher, started out as a boarder in 1910 and worked her way into the American dream by 1930, when she became the owner of this house in Ravenna, where she lived with her daughter, Martha, also a public-school teacher. For sale in 1920 for $6,500, this house was advertised as having an extra-large breakfast nook facing Ravenna Boulevard.

Builder/Contractor: Not Identified

Description: This two-story Dutch Colonial Revival has its main entry on southern side of the house. The street façade has a pair of wood-sash six-over one double-hung windows on the main floor, and another matching pair on the second floor. This form of Dutch Colonial Revival house has faux gambrel roofs on each side with what appears to be a full-width shed dormer on each side. The second floor has a single centrally placed original wood-sash double-hung window flanked by two pairs of original wood-sash double-hung windows. The house has painted horizontal clapboard and all roofs have eave returns.

Cultural Data: Joseph A. Van Ostran and his wife Carrie lived in this house for a short time in the 1930s. While the length of their tenure was brief, their story has much to tell about social constructs in Depression-era America. Joseph's mother, Sarah Zinkon, died at the house in 1932; however, she is listed in the 1930 U.S. census as living as a "patient" in the household of a Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hill, (he was a sheet metal worker), along with five other elderly "patients," one nurse, a cook and various extended family. This arrangement no doubt benefited both families: one that was trying to make ends meet, and another that was struggling to take care of an elderly relative. In the late 1950s, the house was occupied by Dr. and Mrs. John C. Sherman, he a geography professor at the University of Washington. Together, the pair constructed a relief map of a 48-mile stretch of Ft. Simcoe State Park in Yakima County.

The house is sheathed with composite? horizontal siding

Cultural Data: Herbert S. Burtis (1888-1958) was the manager of the Sperry Gyroscope Company. This house was for sale in 1949 for $9,750, 5 rooms on one floor and "full basement of course." By 1984 the price had increased to $74,500.

A gable roof bay located on the northern side of the street façade has the same tripartite window centrally placed. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles. The eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee brackets.

Cultural Data: In 1932, Al Wesner, a meat cutter, shot his friend in the street before shooting himself. The friend, W.E. Bombardier, a fuel salesman with an apt name, had thrown Wesner out of his office earlier for being drunk and unruly. Wesner's estranged wife, Florence Tower, lived at this address. On a less incendiary note, the house was home to Pearl and Elmer Eckart. Elmer came to Seattle in 1917 to work at the post office. He worked at the Greenwood, Wallingford, Ft. Lawton and Main post offices before retiring in 1953. For 10 years beginning in the 1960s, the house was home to Walter E. Gallagher (1923-2012), a divorced custodial father of four rambunctious boys. Gallagher was known as a skilled amateur photographer, local historian and prolific poet. Also, for 60 years, he was standard-bearer for the local Veterans Day parade.

The house is sheathed with cedar shingles with a 2"-over-7" exposure, and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee brackets.

Cultural Data: This house and its occupants seem to have been involved in several freak accidents: in 1925, Ben Barrow (1891-1975), owner of "High Class Plumbing & Heating," was at a filling station when an intoxicated driver plowed into his car, critically injuring the gas station attendant; in 1940, the garage was ignited by two boys playing with firecrackers; and in 1976: Mr. & Mrs. Paul Skorniakoff suffered $21,000 in damages when Fitzpatrick's Appliance Store around the corner burned at the hands of an arsonist. Description: one-and-a-half-story side gable Colonial Revival bungalow has a central projecting low-arch porch roof supported on a pair of non-original square columns that reflect the original Tuscan columns. The porch roof is flanked by original trellis (although it currently has a corrugated-roof covering supported by 2x4s over it) sheltering a full-width entry porch. The central entry doorway has flanking sidelights and the doorway is flanked by a pair of 12-over-one wood-sash double-hung windows. The entry stairs do not appear to have been changed, although the detailing of the arch on the entry porch has been simplified. The main roof is missing a pair of eyebrow dormers. Of the several homes in the district built with this distinctive original design, this one conveys more of its original features than most.

Cultural Data: Theodore Haskell Merriam (1900-1988) was a bank clerk. In the 1950s, Wesley Zioncheck (1892-1959), a real estate man and former owner of the Olympia Furniture Manufacturing Co., lived in this house with his daughter, Amelia Beckmann. Zioncheck had been born in Poland; he came to Seattle in 1907, where he lived with a cousin and worked as a butcher. (Sometime between 1910 and 1930, he changed the spelling of his last name from Zajaczck.) The Zionchecks were a classic American immigration success story. By 1925, Wesley was owner of Olympic Furniture Manufacturing Co.; his cousin, Marion A. Zioncheck (1901-1936) was a U.S. Congressman from Washington's 1st District from 1933-1936.

Description: This one-and-a-half-story side gable Colonial Revival bungalow has a central recessed porch flanked by two gable bays, the southern bay larger. The entry is highlighted by a small horizontal trellis. The larger southern bay has an original wood-sash tripartite window with eight-over-one double-hung windows, and the smaller gable bay has a pair of similar windows. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and all roofs have eave returns.

Cultural Data: Albert H. Greenberg (1879-?) was a salesman. When Mrs. George Shirley (née Elsie Tenney) disappeared from her Ravenna home one day on December of 1944, she described waking up in the vestibule of a downtown apartment building as the "strangest experience" of her life. This may have been the first instance of Elsie's fugue state, but it was not the last: three years later her mother ran a desperate plea in the Seattle Times asking for information as to her daughter's whereabouts.

Builder/Contractor: Not Identified

Description: This two-story rectangular house has a clipped gable roof and a hip roof "aeroplane" second floor. The angled entry is located on the house's northeastern corner and is sheltered by low-slope gable roof. The eastern façade has a tripartite window group on the southern portion and a pair of corner windows on the norther corner. A basement garage door is located below the tripartite window. Gable roofs have full eave returns. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding.

Cultural Data: Hiram Martin Chittenden, Jr. (1894-1971), was the oldest son of Brig. General Hiram M. Chittenden (1858-1917), an engineer for whom the Government Locks in Seattle are named. Chittenden's widow, Nettie (1856-1947), was living in this house with two of her children in 1920. The house passed on to Hiram M. Chittenden, Jr. in 1941. He became a professor at the University of Washington.

Description: This one-story Colonial Revival house has a brick masonry entry porch partially sheltered by a central low pitched arched roof supported on decorative brackets; the entry has been modified, although the house and 1922 cottage also on this site otherwise retain most of their original features. The central entry doorway is flanked on both sides by a pair of wood-sash tripartite windows with eight-light outer sections. A basement garage door is located under the southern tripartite window. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and all roofs have eave returns.

Cultural Data: In 1949, "slim, serious" Melvin M. Rader (1903-1981), a philosophy professor at the University of Washington, was finally able to clear his name of the accusation that he was a Communist spy. He had been accused of having attended a known Communist school in New York state, but after a lengthy fight he was able to prove that he was in fact in Washington state at the time, and also that he was not a member of the Communist Party. His accuser was discredited and found to have perjured himself. In 1969, the University of Washington Press published Professor Rader's book, "False Witness," about his experience.

Description: This simple one-story side gable ranch house has a central entry. The house appears to have retained its original wood-sash windows. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding.

Cultural Data: As in the adjacent property, 6207 22nd Ave NE (22-6207), Meade Hargiss appears to have bought this parcel in 1945 but not built on it until 1947. Hargiss placed ads in the Seattle Times for his "Styldrite" company, so it's a good assumption that he was either a builder or a real estate agent. All listings in the city directory for the 1940s and 1950s place him in Northeast Seattle, but not at either of these addresses.

Builder/Contractor: Not Identified

Description: This one-and-a-half-story bungalow has a full-width entry porch sheltered by a dominate front gable attic extension supported on four square-cased wood columns. The house is sheathed with original thin cedar bevel siding. The house retains most of its original wood-sash, double-hung windows. Until recently the house had an outer sheathing of vinyl siding.

Cultural Data: John N. Quense (1878-1958) was a civil engineer with the City of Seattle in 1917, retaining that position until he retired in 1948. He was largely responsible for the design and construction of City Light's Diablo Dam on the Skagit River. John A. Quense (1913-1974) was a U.S. Navy Captain, and in the late 1950s was named commander of the Naval Ordinance Laboratory in Silver Spring, Maryland. A Graduate of Roosevelt High School, he held three degrees from the University of Washington, including a doctorate in Chemistry, as well as a Masters degree in engineering from Cornell University. The home remained in the Quense family for nearly a century.

Builder/Contractor: Stephen Berg

Description: This Colonial Revival one-and-a-half-story side gable bungalow has a projecting gable roof on the western side supported on ganged square columns with a recessed entry. The columns rest on brick masonry walls and the stair cheeks are original brick masonry. To the left (east) of the entry is an original tripartite window group. The main gable roof is clipped. The original roof had two blister windows that have been replaced by a compatible gable dormer. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and the eaves are cantilevered.

Cultural Data: Robert Bunten (1888-1983) was a marine engineer. He built the house at 1615 NE 63rd Street on speculation. Grace G. Denny (1883-1971) may have been a distance relative to Seattle pioneer David Denny (1882-1903), as the roots of both families can be traced to Indiana. 1615 NE 63rd Street is one of the homes featured in Lila Gault's book The House Next Door: Seattle's Neighborhood Architecture, published in 1981 by Pacific Search Press.

Builder/Contractor: Not Identified

Description: This one-and-a-half-story cross gable Craftsman bungalow has a projecting gable roof entry porch on the western side of the house that is supported on two massive square squat tapered wood-cased columns resting on brick masonry piers. To the east of the entry doorway is an original tripartite wood-sash window. The main roof has a gabled dormer on the eastern side with four wood-sash windows. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee brackets. (Note: this house was extensively damaged by fire in the 1980s but was restored to its original appearance.)

Cultural Data: By 1943, Arthur J. (born c. 1888) & Dorothy B. Lavell and their two daughters had taken up residence at this address. He was a salesman in the paper industry, and later a salvage manager for the War Production Board. Lavell was way ahead of the curve in seeing the uses to which salvaged paper can be put: well before the advent of "recycling," he spearheaded a county-wide paper salvaging campaign in 1944, the proceeds of which went toward charitable and welfare work.

Description: This one-and-a-half-story Colonial Revival house has a central brick masonry entry porch that was partially sheltered by a central low pitched arched roof supported on a pair of Tuscan columns. The central entry doorway is flanked by sidelights, and two original tripartite wood-sash double-hung windows. The clipped gable roof originally had a pair of eyebrow dormers. These were replaced in 1946 by two small gable dormers. At the same time the entry porch roof lost its arched roof, and square columns replaced the original Tuscan columns. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and all roofs have eave returns. Currently the house looks nearly identical to its appearance in a 1946 PSRA photo.

The house is sheathed with cedar shingles and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee brackets.

Cultural Data: Elizabeth McClure was the widow of Horace McClure (1866-1928), a writer for the 100 percent Club. William Latshaw Home (1888-1960), a young mining engineer, and his wife Edgarda MacMullen Home (1888-1957), moved to Seattle in 1939 and lived in this house by at least 1940. During his career, Home worked for the Army Engineers and the Reconstruction Finance Co. The tragedy of the Homes' life played out in the Seattle Times, as the Homes lived out their quotidian life, entering guessing games regarding sporting events (1939), and watching their son, Justus, graduate from West Point (1941), followed by his promotion to Army captain in 1943. Justus was killed in Italy in 1944 at age 24 in a training exercise one week before he was due home on leave to visit the son he had never met.

Cultural Data: Natalie Brodskaya Notkin (1900-1970), was born in Russia and immigrated to the U.S. in 1921. She married James B. Notkin, a mechanical engineer. Natalie was employed as a librarian in the Seattle Public Library's Russia collection. In 1930, Natalie was accused of spreading Communist propaganda by purchasing books by Tolstoy and Gorky from the Soviet Union. In spite of her protests she was fired but went on to a prestigious career with Suzzallo Library at the University of Washington.

Cultural Data: Charles H. Cole (1865-1948) and his wife, Addie Wynhoff Cole (1875-1954) moved to Seattle from Spokane in 1942. Charles was a printer with the Seattle Star, a left-leaning Scripps newspaper that was published in Seattle from 1899-1947. Scripps was an unusual capitalist in that he thought that advertising corrupted journalism and refused to suppress negative stories about the Star's advertisers. The thrust of the Seattle Star was to support labor and working people.

Description: This well-preserved one-story intersecting gable bungalow has the main roof ridge running north-south with two outer bays having ridges running east-west. The street façade has a low-slope arched roof supported by a pair of Tuscan columns. The entry doorway has a pair of sidelights. The entry porch is flanked by a pair of wood-sash tripartite windows with 12-light outer windows. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and all roofs have eave returns.

Cultural Data: This house has an interesting seafaring history. Samuel B. Grenell (ca.1901-1982) and his wife Mary (née Galbraith) lived at this address in the 1950s. Grenell was supervisor of the Northwest District for the National Geodetic Survey. The NGS is charged with providing "a consistent coordinate system that defines latitude, longitude, height, scale, gravity, and orientation throughout the United States and its territories." In 1927, Grenell was attacked by an 800-lb. grizzly bear while working on remote Montague Island in the Gulf of Alaska. In a sad twist of fate, the Grenells' son, Robert G., drowned in the Arctic Ocean in 1952 while employed by the Geodetic Survey. After the Grenells' tenure, the house was occupied Francis B. Quinn (d. 1958) and family. Quinn was employed by the Geodetic Survey for 33 years; his last duty was as commanding officer for the Pathfinder, which did survey work in Alaska.

Description: This one-and-a-half-story Craftsman bungalow has a half-width entry porch on the eastern side sheltered by a roof extension. The gable extension is supported on two Tuscan columns resting on brick masonry piers. To the west of the entry is an original wood-sash double-hung tripartite window with upper divided lights. The main roof has a pair of small gable dormers, each with a pair of small horizontal windows. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee brackets. The rear gable roof was raised slightly in a recent remodel so that the roof slopes front to back are unequal.

Cultural Data: George S. Smith along with his wives Lucy (d. 1930) and then Jennie, led unusual and exciting lives, at least if one is to judge by Seattle Times articles. In 1936, Mrs. Smith lost $.35 in a crime spree on Naomi Pl.; in the same year, she fell into the lake at Denny Park and had to be revived; in 1940, the Smiths were awakened by a fire in their basement; and in 1955, Smith offered his services as a "swarm removal expert," as part of his volunteer work with the Puget Sound Beekeepers Association.

Sub Group: Side Gable Bungalow (remodeled 1995)

Builder/Contractor: Norman P. Lacy

Description: This one-and-a-half-story side gable Craftsman bungalow was substantially remodeled around 1995. This remodel largely retained the projecting gable roof entry porch on the eastern side of the house that is supported on two pairs of square wood-cased columns. The remodeled house has a higher roof, allowing a larger second floor area, and features a front gable roof form. It also includes a new shed dormer, on the eastern side of the main roof, and modern windows. Additional remodeling was done in 2011 for sunroom/kitchen at the back of the house. The house is currently sheathed with cedar shingles, and the eaves and bargeboards are supported by knee braces, maintaining compatibility with historic neighboring bungalows.

Cultural Data: Norman P. Lacy, a contractor who lived across the street at 1732 NE Naomi Place, built this house on speculation. John A. Kennedy (1877-) was a travelling auto salesman. Lauren McConachie, FAIA, a notable Seattle architect, designed the 1995 remodel and also a second-story addition to the house in 2011. The classification of this house could be reconsidered after 2045.

Sub Group: Hip Roof

Builder/Contractor: Home Bldg. Co./N. P. Lacy

Description: This classic hip-roof foursquare or "Seattle Box" has a stucco cladding. The house has a full-width entry porch and the second floor has projecting corner bays on the southern side. The clinker bricks on the chimney on the eastern side exactly match the adjacent house to the east, which was identified as having been built by Norman P. Lacy. The attic level has a hip-roof dormer. The original decorative windowbox on the second floor of the south façade remains intact. The house also retains its original windows and trim. The lattice screen was added around the late 1970s.

Cultural Data: This house was probably built and owned by Norman P. Lacy, a builder and mason who built and lived at the adjacent house to the east—1732 NE Naomi Place. Lacy advertised a house for sale on NE 63rd Street in 1910. The Home Building Company likely financed the house construction. Alva B Lund (1880-1944) was Assistant Treasurer of the City of Seattle.

Builder/Contractor: Norman P. Lacy

Description: This house was originally a one-and-a-half story side gable bungalow with a projecting gable roof entry porch on the western side. The upper roof had a twin hip roof dormers on the north and south. The house was remodeled between 1984 and 1987 from designs prepared by the Johnson Partnership, Larry E. Johnson AIA Principal, a Seattle architectural firm. The house retains the original first floor clinker-brick veneer, tapered cobble-stone entry porch columns and a large wood-sash double-hung window with upper diamond pattern leaded glass. The house is currently a two-story cross gable house. The original gable roof on the entry porch is now a deck with a spade patterned guardrail. A non-original wood-sash tripartite double-hung window is located on the eastern side of the second-floor street façade and the gable end has an arched tripartite window. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles above the first floor and the north and south roofs have eave returns. The house may be eligible as a contributing resource in 2037.

Cultural Data: Norman P. Lacy (1869-1916) was of Irish descent and a masonry contractor and builder. Lacy was a builder of the Boyer/Lambert House at 1617 Boyer Avenue E, a Seattle Landmark, which features massive stone work.

Description: This one-and-a-half-story front gable Craftsman bungalow has a projecting nearly flat roof entry porch on the western side of the house that is two square columns; this porch dates back at least to 1937, as shown in the 1937 photo. The main floor has four non-original windows on the eastern side with a fifth window wrapping around the corner. Dormers have also been added on the eastern side of the main roof. The upper floor gable end has a pair of non-original windows. The house has lost its original roof overhangs and eave supports and is presently sheathed with vinyl siding. While the house has lost its overhangs, eave supports, and shingle siding sometime before 1937, these features still appear on the detached garage located behind the house, hinting a likely remodel of the house prior to 1937.

Architect: Robert Durham, FAIA

Classification: Historic Contributing

Historic Names: Easton House

Original Owner(s): Erving & Maude Erving

Source: PSRA 1969, KCA

Sub Group: One-story, Modern

Builder/Contractor: Not Identified

Description: The original 1922 cottage that was built on this lot was demolished in 1968. The existing one-story Northwest Contemporary house is largely rectangular, with a shed roof on the south and a flat roof section making up the northern portion. The southern portion shows a stone wall to the street, with upper clerestory windows. The house is accessed by way of a wooden bridge. An attached garage is located in the house's northeastern corner, also accessed by a bridge. This house represents the last (most recent) house in the district since the period of significance ends in 1969.

Cultural Data: Erving E. Easton (1912-1986) was an industrial arts teacher at Roosevelt High School.

Above the bay is a gable attic dormer. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding.

Cultural Data: Almond Ray Phillips (1886-?) was President and Manager of Commercial Services Inc., whose function is lost to history. The life of Annie Wimmer is likewise a mystery, not least to her friends, who placed a want ad in the Seattle Times in April of 1908, seeking information as to her whereabouts.

Description: This one-story hip roof Colonial Revival house originally had a recessed entry on the norther side of the street façade that has now been filled in with an entry doorway with sidelights. There is a small attic gable dormer above the doorway. A group of four eight-light wood casement windows has also been replaced by three nine-over-one double-hung windows. The southern façade has a large gable roof with a central brick masonry chimney that intersects with the hip roof. The house is sheathed with horizontal bevel siding

Cultural Data: This house was for sale numerous times in the early half of the 20th Century. In spite of the number of owners, they left behind few clues as to their lives. We do know, however, that Ben Barrows, a plumber, received high praise for his work from insurance magnate A. P. Merrill, whose new downtown high-rise ("home for tenants of the highest type") was graced by Barrows' plumbing fixtures.

Description: This one-and-a-half-story side gable Craftsman bungalow has a full-width entry porch with a central entry stairway is sheltered by the main roof overhang. The porch roof is supported on the corners by tapered brick masonry columns, which have since been painted, and two square wood-cased columns flank the entry stairs. The porch retains its original guardrail. The main floor windows appear to be the original wood-sash double-hung windows, and the main roof has a shed dormer with an original tripartite wood-sash double-hung window. The house is sheathed with cedar shingles and the eaves and bargeboard were cantilevered. The eaves have been clipped back and bargeboards were removed.
